BEFORE YOU CALL YOURSELF A MAN

This chapter won't be in your answer sheet, but it will decide who you become.

A street light shouldn't be her only security.

Ask your sister why she looks back twice after dark. She fears our footsteps, not the night.

Don't be the shadow that makes her run. Be the reason she walks home safe.

She looked down. She didn't blush.

Real life is not a film sequence. Looking away and walking faster means discomfort, not shyness. Her silence is never an invitation.

Don't mistake distress for attention. Be the man who understands that "No" means stop.

Don't be a coward in your group chat.

When someone in the group shares a screenshot, forwards a photo without permission, or cracks a cheap joke about a girl — it doesn't make you cool. Don't tap laughing emojis.

Be the friend who stands up and says: "Delete it, bro! We don't do this."

Staying quiet is not staying out of it. It's choosing his side.

A crowded corridor does not make you powerful.

Standing in groups on staircases during breaks, blocking water coolers, or deliberately loitering near their washrooms isn't cool. It is cheap intimidation. It only proves your lack of manners.

Be the gentleman who steps aside, clears the way, and lets her voice be heard.

Her pain is not your classroom entertainment.

Whispering when a pad is seen or mocking a stain is the lowest form of immaturity. It is biology, not a secret crime.

Don't make a natural process feel like an embarrassment. Be the mature young man who offers quiet support, understanding, and respect.

RESPECT IS THE REAL MARKSHEET.

Marks will get you a seat in college. The way you treat her decides whether you deserve one. Be that man, in the street, in the corridor, and in the group chat.

✍ MY PLEDGE: I promise to be the reason she feels safe, on the street, in the corridor and in the group chat.

Author's Note

Dear Students and Esteemed Teachers,

I am Nitesh Prakash, an educator dedicated to making quality learning simple, practical, and accessible for every student across India.

Over the years, while mentoring Class 12 students, I observed a common challenge: students dedicate months of disciplined preparation to their core subjects, yet approach 100-mark English literature with hesitation. The metaphorical depth of poetry, the line-by-line hidden meanings in Rainbow (Part 2), and the historical timelines of The Story of English often feel overwhelming. Outdated guides force students into blind cramming rather than genuine understanding.

This book was created to change that approach entirely. Dedicated exclusively to Rainbow (Part 2) and The Story of English, every page is engineered around clarity, comprehension, and the actual Bihar Board examination pattern.

Read each chapter with curiosity, revise the core themes, and write your answers with confidence. Scoring 90+ marks in BSEB English is not a distant dream—it is simply a matter of the right strategy.

I extend my heartfelt gratitude to the educators, mentors, and students whose trust inspired this project. Wishing you great focus and grand success in your upcoming Board Examinations!

> You do not need to be extraordinary to start, but you must take the first step with clarity to become extraordinary.

Warm regards,

Nitesh Prakash

ESSAY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Indian Civilization and Culture

by Mahatma Gandhi

SUMMARY

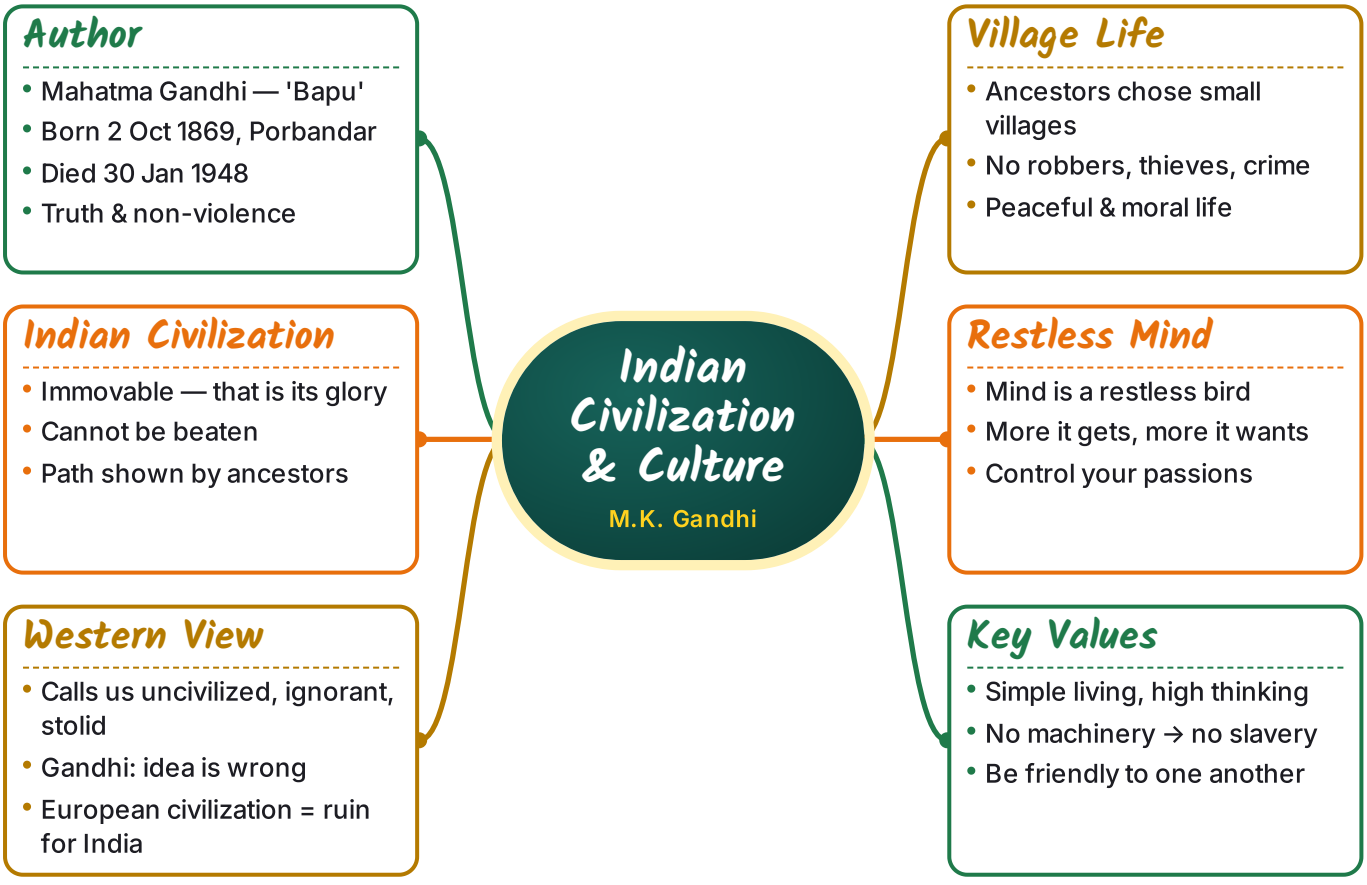

Indian Civilization and Culture is an essay written by Mahatma Gandhi, who is known as the Father of the Nation or Bapu. He was born on 2nd October 1869 at Porbandar in Gujarat. In this essay, Gandhiji highlights the important features of Indian civilization and culture.

He says that the foundation of Indian civilization is far better than that of Western civilization, and that our civilization cannot be beaten in the world because we are following the path our ancestors made for us.

Western people sometimes say that we are uncivilized, ignorant and stolid. Gandhiji disagrees — he thinks this idea is wrong. He believes that we can do everything that Western people do; however, our culture and way of life do not always allow us to do the same things they do.

Gandhiji tells us that our ancestors preferred living in villages to cities. They knew that cities had many evils like crime, robbers and thieves, while in villages people could live peacefully. Gandhiji says that the mind is a restless bird — the more it gets, the more it wants, and it remains unsatisfied. So we should not indulge our passions.

SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - INDIAN CIVILIZATION AND CULTURE

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS

1. How does Mahatma Gandhi want his countrymen to deal with modern civilization? 2021
2. What is civilization in the real sense of the term? 2020, 2018
3. Why did our ancestors dissuade us from luxuries and pleasures? 2019
4. What, according to Gandhiji, is the 'sheet anchor of our hope'? 2025

LONG ANSWER QUESTION

1. Write the summary of 'Indian Civilization and Culture'. 2025, 2016, 2013, 2012

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT

1. "The common people lived independently and followed their agricultural occupation." 2023, 2020
2. "A certain degree of physical harmony and comfort is necessary, but above a certain level it becomes a hindrance instead of help." 2024
3. "Justice was tolerably fair. The ordinary rule was to avoid courts." 2025

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - INDIAN CIVILIZATION AND CULTURE

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. Gandhiji wants Indians to stay away from the blind love of modern Western civilization. It worships material comfort and makes man a slave of his wants. He wants us to follow our ancient Indian civilization, control our desires, live simply and do our duty, because only this way leads to real happiness.

2. According to Gandhiji, civilization is that mode of conduct which points out to man the path of duty. Doing one's duty means observing morality, and observing morality means controlling our mind and passions. In this way we come to know ourselves. The Gujarati word for civilization means 'good conduct'.

3. Our ancestors knew that the mind is a restless bird — the more it gets, the more it wants, and it is never satisfied. Running after luxuries makes man greedy and unhappy. They also knew that happiness is largely a mental condition. So they set a limit to our indulgences and taught us simple living.

4. Gandhiji says that our old and tested Indian civilization is the sheet anchor of our hope. Other ancient civilizations like those of Rome, Greece and Egypt have disappeared, but India's civilization has survived because it is based on strong moral values, self-control and duty. It still guides and saves us.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1 'Indian Civilization and Culture' is an essay by Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation. In it he praises the greatness of Indian civilization and shows why it is better than modern Western civilization.

Gandhiji says that the civilization India has evolved is not to be beaten in the world. Rome, Greece and the Egypt of the Pharaohs have passed away, but India still stands firm. Western people call us uncivilized and ignorant, but Gandhiji says this is wrong. Indian civilization is immovable, and that is its glory.

According to him, civilization is that mode of conduct which points out to man the path of duty. The mind is a restless bird; the more it gets, the more it wants. So our ancestors set a limit to our indulgences. They did not invent big machines because they knew machines would make us slaves. They were happy in small villages, followed their agriculture independently, avoided courts and lived a moral life.

Modern civilization, on the other hand, is the worship of material things. Gandhiji advises Indians to cling to their old civilization, which is the sheet anchor of our hope, and to lead a simple life of self-control and duty.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Indian Civilization and Culture' written by Mahatma Gandhi.

CONTEXT Gandhiji describes the simple and happy life of people in ancient India under the guidance of our ancestors.

EXPLANATION Our ancestors were satisfied with small villages. The common people were free and self-reliant. They depended on agriculture, not on machines or big cities. They enjoyed true 'home rule' and lived peacefully. Gandhiji means that such simple, independent village life was the real strength of Indian civilization.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Indian Civilization and Culture' written by Mahatma Gandhi.

CONTEXT Gandhiji warns us against the endless desire for comforts that modern civilization encourages.

EXPLANATION Some comfort is needed to keep the body healthy. But when we go on increasing our comforts and luxuries, they stop helping us and start harming us. They make us lazy, greedy and slaves of our wants. So man should limit his desires and live a simple, moral life.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Indian Civilization and Culture' written by Mahatma Gandhi.

CONTEXT Gandhiji explains how disputes were settled in ancient Indian villages.

EXPLANATION In old India, justice was reasonably fair. People did not run to courts and lawyers, because courts bring quarrels, delay and expense. Disputes were settled peacefully in the village itself. Gandhiji praises this simple system, which kept society honest and united.

SPEECH - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Bharat is My Home

by Dr. Zakir Hussain

SUMMARY

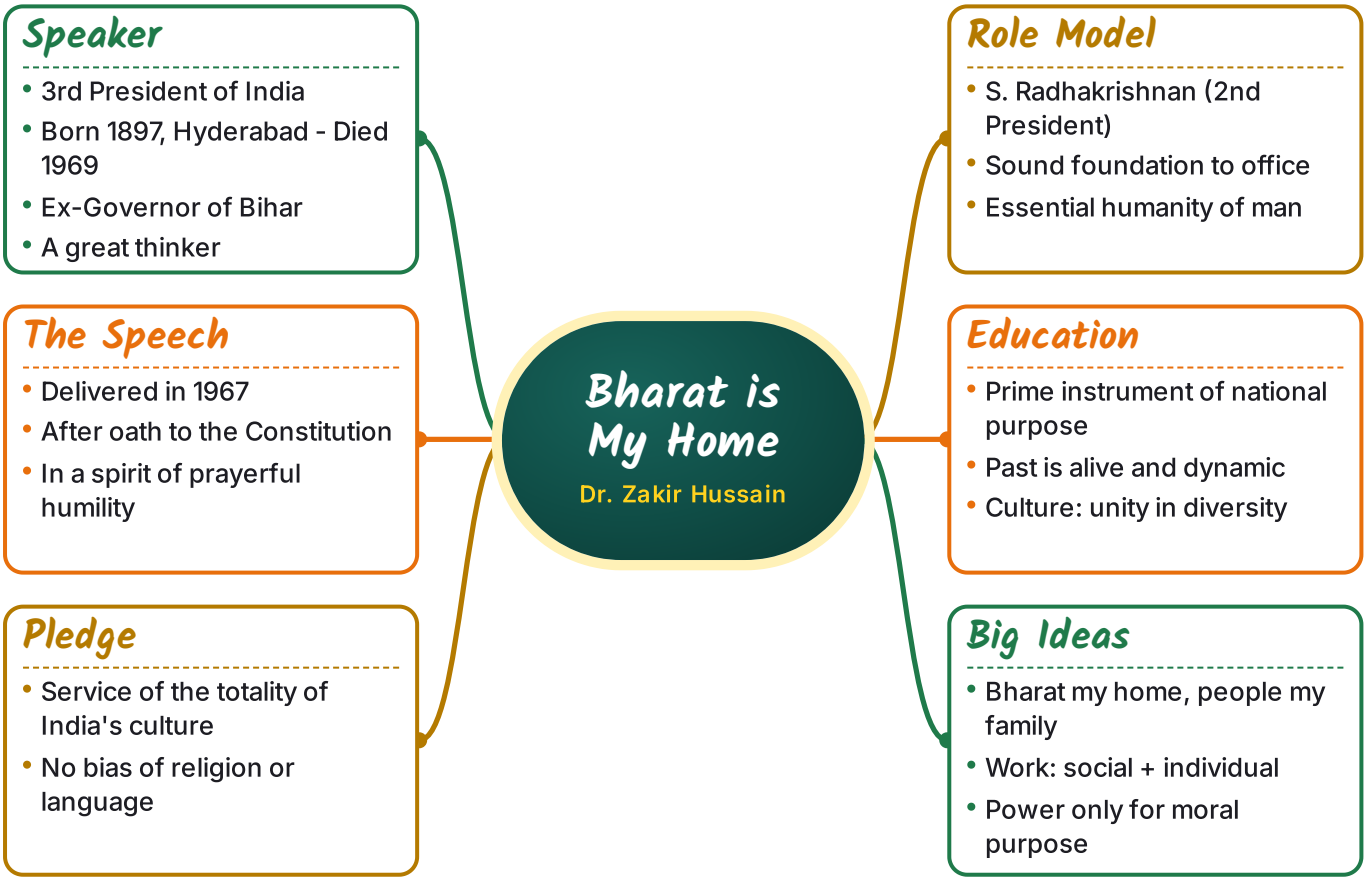

Bharat is My Home is a speech delivered by Dr. Zakir Hussain, the third President of India. It is an extract from the speech he gave in 1967 after taking the oath as President. In this first speech as President, Dr. Zakir Hussain pledges himself "to the service of the totality of India's culture".

First of all, he thanks the people of India for electing him to the highest office in the land. Then he recalls Dr. Radhakrishnan's contribution to the presidency, saying that Radhakrishnan gave the office a mental equipment and a sound foundation. He pledges to preserve the Constitution, the culture and the glory of India, and assures Indians that he will serve them without any discrimination of religion or language.

According to Dr. Zakir Hussain, the prime instrument for developing India is education. He accepts India as his home and its people as his family. He sees two aspects of work — social and individual — and suggests that we think about the development of both, because only then is the development of India possible.

In conclusion, this is a great speech in which Dr. Zakir Hussain pledges his loyalty to India and successfully conveys his message to every Indian.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - BHARAT IS MY HOME

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. Dr. Zakir Hussain calls education the prime instrument of national purpose. He believes education should develop the whole personality — body, mind and character. It should make people good citizens, teach them their duties, and help in building a strong, united and modern nation.
2. India as an independent state is young, because it became free only in 1947. But its people are ancient, with a civilization and culture thousands of years old. So Dr. Zakir Hussain calls India the young state of an ancient people, who must build a new future on the strength of their old heritage.
3. Dr. Zakir Hussain is overwhelmed because the people of India have chosen him, a humble teacher, for the highest office of the nation. He feels deeply grateful for this honour and trust. He promises to serve the country in a spirit of prayerful humility and dedication.
4. The business of education is to develop the whole person and make him useful to society. It should train the body, sharpen the mind and build moral character. Through education the individual grows, and with his growth the nation also grows. That is why it is the prime instrument of national purpose.

MY NOTES

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1 'Bharat is My Home' is the speech delivered by Dr. Zakir Hussain in 1967, after he took the oath as the President of India. In it he expresses his love for the nation and his ideas about its future.

Dr. Zakir Hussain thanks the people for choosing him for the highest office. He feels overwhelmed and promises to work in a spirit of prayerful humility. He pays tribute to his predecessor, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, who never lost his faith in the essential humanity of man.

He says, "The whole of India is my home and its people are my family." The family is big and is growing at an inconveniently fast rate, yet he pledges his loyalty to the country irrespective of religion, language, caste or region. India, he says, is the young state of an ancient people. The past is not dead and static; it is alive and dynamic, and we must build our future on its best values.

He calls education the prime instrument of national purpose and nation-building. He believes the individual and society must grow together, and power must be used only for moral purposes. He ends with the hope of building a strong, united and prosperous India.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Bharat is My Home', the speech delivered by Dr. Zakir Hussain after taking the oath as President of India in 1967.

CONTEXT Dr. Zakir Hussain speaks about the role of India's ancient heritage in building modern India.

EXPLANATION Our past is not something finished and lifeless. It is a living force that still shapes our thoughts, values and actions. India's rich culture can inspire and guide us. We should keep the best of our past and use it to build a better future.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Bharat is My Home', the speech delivered by Dr. Zakir Hussain after taking the oath as President of India in 1967.

CONTEXT Dr. Zakir Hussain explains the relationship between the individual and society, and the role of education.

EXPLANATION An individual cannot reach his full growth alone. He lives in society, so society must also progress along with him. If society remains backward, the individual's growth stays incomplete. Hence education must develop both the individual and the society together.

STORY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

A Pinch of Snuff

by Manohar Malgonkar

SUMMARY

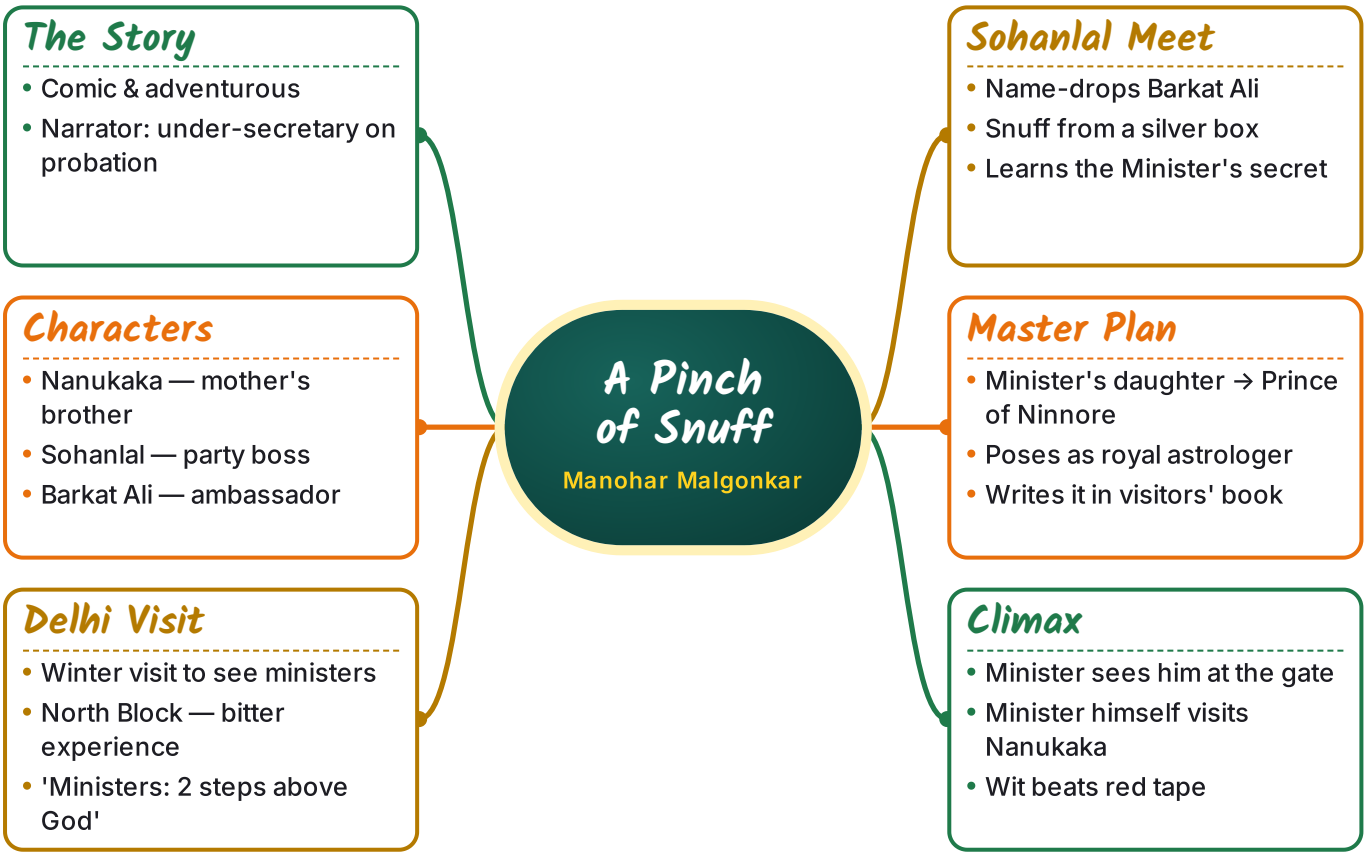

A Pinch of Snuff is a comic and interesting story written by Manohar Malgonkar, full of wit and adventure. The story begins with the narrator's mother announcing the visit of her brother, Nanukaka. The narrator is somewhat taken aback and shocked by the news.

Nanukaka comes to Delhi to see some ministers, and the narrator, an under-secretary, has to take him to the North Block on his mother's insistence — but Nanukaka's experience there is bitter. Later he goes to meet Sohanlal, a party boss, and successfully impresses him with his words and wit, showing that he knows the ambassador Barkat Ali very well.

While talking with Sohanlal, he learns about the Welfare Minister: Sohanlal wanted his son to marry the Welfare Minister's daughter, but the Minister refused, having fixed his daughter's marriage to the Prince of Ninnore.

Now Nanukaka goes to meet the Welfare Minister in the guise of the hereditary astrologer of the Maharaja of Ninnore and writes this in the visitors' book. The Minister, who had seen him while being driven out of the gate, himself comes to visit Nanukaka at home. Overall, "A Pinch of Snuff" is a delightful story.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - A PINCH OF SNUFF

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The author went dressed like a chauffeur, in a Jodhpuri coat with a huge orange turban tied around his head. Nanukaka had planned this so that he himself would look like a very important person — a royal astrologer arriving in a big car with his own driver.
2. Nanukaka dressed up as an astrologer and wrote in the visitor's book that he was the 'Hereditary Astrologer to the Maharaja of Ninnore'. Then, loudly, he told his 'chauffeur' to drive to Maharaja Sutkatta's palace to return the horoscopes. This clever trick made the Minister eager to meet him.

MY NOTES

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1 'A Pinch of Snuff' is a humorous short story by Manohar Malgaonkar. It shows how a clever, smooth-talking man can get his work done by tricks, while honest people wait.

The narrator is an Under-Secretary on probation in Delhi. His mother tells him that her brother Nanukaka is coming to Delhi to see a Minister. The narrator is worried, because ministers do not meet ordinary people for weeks or months. Nanukaka arrives, travelling second class on a third-class ticket, with a kitten that travels free! He always takes a pinch of snuff before he speaks.

Nanukaka has a plan. He gives the dhobi his old coat with a bearer cheque in the pocket. At Sikka Auto Dealers, the dhobi comes running with the 'found' cheque, so the dealers think Nanukaka is very rich and let him try a royal car. Dressed as an astrologer, with the narrator as his chauffeur, he goes to the Welfare Minister's house and writes in the visitor's book that he is the 'Hereditary Astrologer to the Maharaja of Ninnore'.

The Minister becomes restless to meet him, and Nanukaka's work is done at once. The narrator wonders at his uncle's art of lying and winning the trust of the powerful. The story is an amusing satire on politicians, officials and human weakness.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Pinch of Snuff', a humorous short story written by Manohar Malgaonkar.

CONTEXT Nanukaka is preparing a plan to impress the car dealers and, through them, the Minister.

EXPLANATION Nanukaka gave the dhobi his old coat with a bearer cheque of a large amount in its pocket and secretly told him what to do. Later, at Sikka Auto Dealers, the dhobi came running with the cheque, saying he had found it. The dealers thought Nanukaka was very rich and let him use a royal car. The line shows his cunning and his skill in using people.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Pinch of Snuff', a humorous short story written by Manohar Malgaonkar.

CONTEXT The narrator says this when his mother tells him that Nanukaka is coming to Delhi to see a Minister.

EXPLANATION The narrator is shocked and worried. He knows that ministers are very busy and do not meet ordinary people for weeks or even months. So he fears Nanukaka will have to stay with them for a long time. The line adds humour, because Nanukaka actually gets his work done very quickly.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Pinch of Snuff', a humorous short story written by Manohar Malgaonkar.

CONTEXT The narrator brings Nanukaka home from the railway station.

EXPLANATION Mother was very happy to see her brother. She stood at the door with a big, bright smile to welcome him. The line shows her love and respect for Nanukaka, and also the warm family atmosphere into which the clever uncle arrives.

4 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Pinch of Snuff', a humorous short story written by Manohar Malgaonkar.

CONTEXT The narrator describes how he took Nanukaka to the Minister's office.

EXPLANATION Because his mother insisted, the narrator took leave to help his uncle and drove him to the North Block, where ministers have their offices. But Nanukaka could not get an appointment there. The line shows the narrator's sense of duty to his family, and sets up the clever trick Nanukaka plays later.

SPEECH - RAINBOW (PART 2)

I Have a Dream

by Martin Luther King Jr.

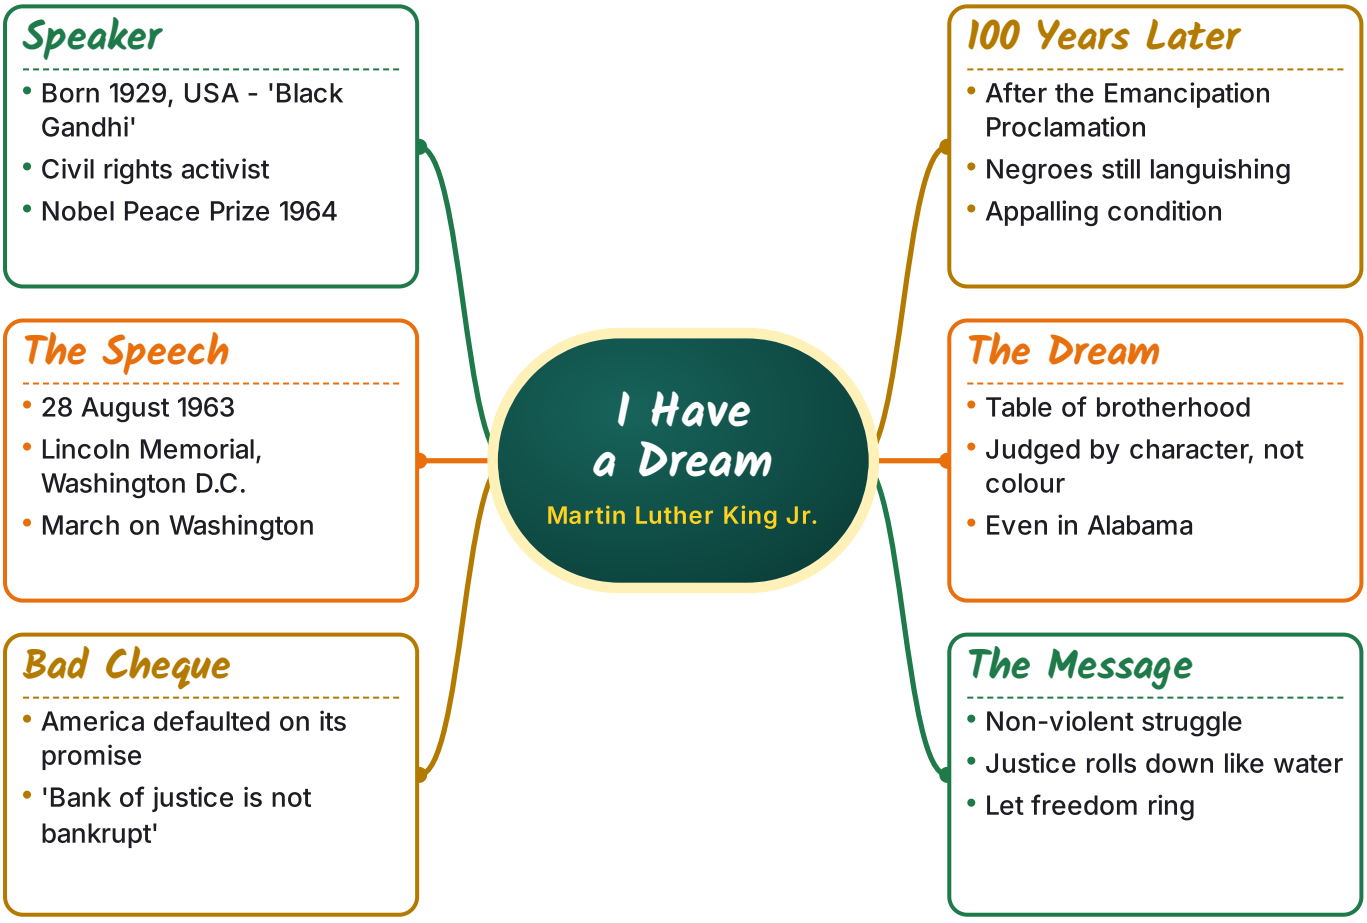

SUMMARY

Martin Luther King Jr. delivered the famous 'I Have a Dream' speech on 28 August 1963 at the Lincoln Memorial, Washington D.C. He was a civil rights activist and a Nobel Peace Prize winner who wanted to make things fair for Black people in America. He said Black people were still being treated badly in places like Alabama.

He compared it to receiving a bad cheque — not being treated as full citizens. He said America was doing well, but Black people were still struggling. Martin had a dream that the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners would sit together at the table of brotherhood.

He wanted everyone to march together until Black people had the same rights as white people. He dreamt that his children would be judged by the content of their character, not the colour of their skin, and of a future where Black and white people could live together peacefully. This speech was very important for Black people's rights, and it inspired millions.

2. "I have a dream that my four children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the colour of their skin but by the content of their character." 2025
3. "We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plane of dignity and discipline." 2026

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - I HAVE A DREAM

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. 'Trials and tribulations' means the great sufferings and hardships of the Black people in America. They faced racial discrimination, police brutality, jail, poverty and insults only because of their colour. King tells them that this unearned suffering is redemptive, and asks them to continue their struggle with faith.

2. King says that even a hundred years after the Emancipation Proclamation, the Negro is not free. His life is crippled by segregation and discrimination. He lives on a lonely island of poverty in the middle of material prosperity, and still languishes in the corners of American society, an exile in his own land.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'I Have a Dream' is the historic speech delivered by Martin Luther King, Jr. on 28 August 1963 at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. In it he demands equal rights and freedom for Black Americans.

   King reminds the audience that a hundred years ago Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation, which gave hope to millions of slaves. But one hundred years later, the Negro is still not free. He is crippled by segregation and discrimination and lives in poverty. America has given the Negro a 'bad cheque' marked 'insufficient funds', but they refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt.

   He warns that the Negroes will not rest until they get justice, and justice rolls down like water. At the same time he asks his people to fight with dignity and discipline, never with violence or hatred, and to go on working with faith.

   Then he shares his dream — a dream that one day all men will be treated as equal, that his four little children will be judged by the content of their character, not the colour of their skin, and that Black and white children will join hands as brothers and sisters. He ends with the hope that freedom will ring everywhere and all will say, "Free at last!"

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'I Have a Dream', the famous speech delivered by Martin Luther King, Jr. at the Lincoln Memorial, Washington D.C., on 28 August 1963.

   CONTEXT These are the closing words of the speech, in which King describes the day of freedom he dreams of.

   EXPLANATION King imagines a day when all Americans, Black and white, of every religion, will be truly free and equal. On that day they will join hands and sing this old Negro spiritual with joy. The line expresses his hope, faith and joy at the thought of complete freedom.

CONTEXT King describes his dream of an equal America.

EXPLANATION King hopes that racial discrimination will end. In the America of his dream, people will be judged by their character and qualities, not by their colour. His own four children will enjoy equal respect and opportunities. The line is the heart of his message of equality and justice.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'I Have a Dream', the famous speech delivered by Martin Luther King, Jr. at the Lincoln Memorial, Washington D.C., on 28 August 1963.

CONTEXT King advises his people on how they should fight for their rights.

EXPLANATION King does not want the struggle for freedom to turn into violence or hatred. He tells his people to fight peacefully, with self-respect and self-control, and to meet physical force with soul force. Influenced by Mahatma Gandhi, he believes non-violence is the right way to win justice.

ESSAY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Ideas That Have Helped Mankind

by Bertrand Russell

SUMMARY

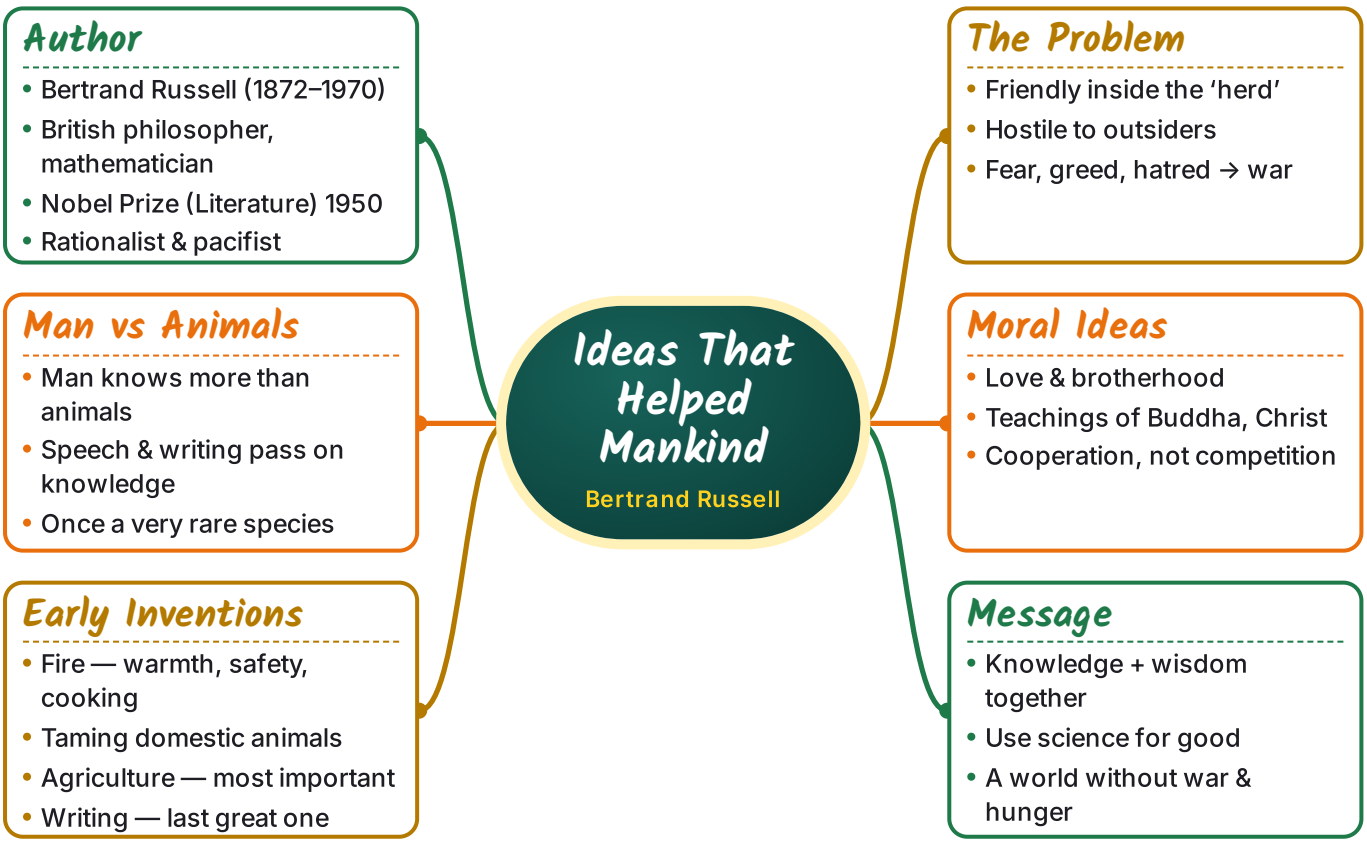

Ideas That Have Helped Mankind is an essay by Bertrand Russell (1872–1970), a great British philosopher, mathematician and thinker who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1950. In this essay he explains which ideas helped man rise from a weak, rare species to the master of the earth.

Russell says that man is ahead of animals because of knowledge and the power to pass it on through speech and writing. Early man was helped by a few great inventions. Fire gave him warmth, safety from wild animals and cooked food. Then came the taming of domestic animals, which made life pleasant. Even more important was agriculture, which gave a regular supply of food and freed man from the constant fear of starvation. The last great prehistoric invention was the art of writing.

But knowledge and skill alone are not enough. Russell points out that man is friendly within his own group or 'herd', but hostile to outsiders. Fear, greed and hatred lead to wars, and modern science has made wars more dangerous than ever.

So mankind needs two kinds of ideas: ideas of knowledge and technique, and moral ideas like love, brotherhood and cooperation, taught by great teachers such as Buddha and Christ. Russell's message is clear — if man uses science with wisdom and kindness, he can build a happy world free from war and poverty.

SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - IDEAS THAT HAVE HELPED MANKIND

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS

1 What was the role of fire in our development? 2021

LONG ANSWER QUESTION

1. Write the summary of 'Ideas That Have Helped Mankind'. 2024, 2019, 2017, 2015, 2013

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT

1. "It is obvious that we know more than animals do, and it is common to consider this one of our advantages." 2023, 2021, 2018
2. "Even more important than the domestication of animals was the invention of agriculture." 2020
3. "Within the herd we are more friendly to each other than are many species of animals..." 2022

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - IDEAS THAT HAVE HELPED MANKIND

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. Fire was one of the earliest and most important discoveries of man. It gave him warmth in cold weather, protection from wild animals at night, and the means to cook food, which made it easy to eat and digest. With fire, man could live in colder places and his survival became much safer.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'Ideas That Have Helped Mankind' is an essay by Bertrand Russell, the British philosopher who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1950. He discusses the ideas that helped man grow and the ideas he needs for a better future.

   Russell says that man knows more than animals, and he can pass on his knowledge through speech and writing. There was a time when man was a very rare species. Some great inventions helped him survive. Fire gave warmth, safety and cooked food. The taming of domestic animals made life pleasant. Even more important was agriculture, which gave a steady food supply and freed man from the fear of starvation. The last great prehistoric invention was writing.

   But knowledge alone is not enough. Man is friendly within his own group or 'herd', but hostile to those outside it. Fear, greed and hatred have caused wars, and modern science has made war more terrible.

   Russell divides helpful ideas into two kinds: ideas of knowledge and technique, and moral ideas such as love, brotherhood and cooperation, taught by Buddha and Christ. He concludes that mankind can be happy only if it uses its knowledge with wisdom and treats the whole world as one family.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Ideas That Have Helped Mankind' written by Bertrand Russell.

   CONTEXT Russell discusses what makes human beings superior to animals.

   EXPLANATION Human beings have far more knowledge than animals. Most people think this knowledge is our great advantage. Russell agrees that knowledge — passed on through speech and writing — has helped man progress, but he also hints that knowledge is useful only when it is used wisely and for the good of all.

2. REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Ideas That Have Helped Mankind' written by Bertrand Russell.

   CONTEXT Russell describes the great prehistoric inventions that helped mankind.

   EXPLANATION Taming animals made life easier, but agriculture was a still greater step. It gave man a regular supply of food, so he no longer had to wander for food or fear starvation. People could settle in one place, and this led to villages, towns and civilization.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'Ideas That Have Helped Mankind' written by Bertrand Russell.

CONTEXT Russell explains man's social nature and its limits.

EXPLANATION Man is a social being. Inside his own group — family, community or nation — he is friendly and cooperative, even more than many animals. But towards people outside his 'herd' he is often hostile. Russell says this attitude causes conflict and war, and man must learn to treat all humanity as one herd.

STORY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

The Artist

by Shiga Naoya

SUMMARY

The Artist is a short story by Shiga Naoya (1883–1971), a famous Japanese short-story writer known for his sensitive picture of people and their culture. The story shows how the adult world often crushes the natural talent of a child.

Seibei is a twelve-year-old boy still at primary school. He has a strange passion — collecting gourds. He buys them cheaply, cleans them, removes the seeds and polishes them with tea until they shine. His father does not like this hobby at all.

One day Seibei finds a very ordinary-looking but beautiful gourd in a shop and buys it for ten sen. His heart beats fast with joy. He takes it to school and polishes it under his desk during class. The teacher catches him, takes away the gourd and says, "There's absolutely no future for a boy like you." He goes to Seibei's home and complains to his mother. When the father comes back, he beats Seibei and breaks all his gourds with a hammer.

The teacher gives the gourd to the old school porter, who sells it to a curio-dealer for fifty sen. The dealer later sells it to a wealthy collector for six hundred yen — a huge sum. Nobody understood Seibei's true artistic eye. Seibei now takes to painting, but his father has already started scolding him for that too.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - THE ARTIST

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. When Seibei's father came home and heard the teacher's complaint, he became very angry. He scolded and beat Seibei, called him a hopeless boy, and then took a hammer and broke all his gourds one by one. Seibei only turned pale and said nothing.
2. One day Seibei saw a very ordinary-looking gourd in a little shop. To him it was remarkable — perfectly shaped and full of beauty. His heart began to beat faster with excitement. He bought it for just ten sen and rushed home with it, full of joy.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'The Artist' is a short story by the Japanese writer Shiga Naoya. It tells how the adult world fails to understand and encourage the natural talent of a child.

   Seibei is a twelve-year-old boy who is still at primary school. He has a passion for collecting gourds. He buys them cheaply, cleans them, takes out the seeds and polishes them with tea until they shine. He has a real eye for beauty, but his father does not like this hobby.

   One day Seibei finds a gourd that looks ordinary to others but remarkable to him. He buys it for ten sen and takes it to school, where he polishes it under his desk during class. The teacher catches him, takes the gourd away and says, "There's absolutely no future for a boy like you." He complains to Seibei's mother. When the father hears this, he beats Seibei and breaks all his gourds with a hammer.

   The teacher gives the confiscated gourd to the school porter, who sells it to a curio-dealer for fifty sen. The dealer sells it to a wealthy collector for six hundred yen. Seibei loses interest in gourds and takes up painting, but his father has already started scolding him for that too. The story is full of irony and shows how elders crush young talent.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Artist', a short story written by the Japanese writer Shiga Naoya.

   CONTEXT The teacher says this when he catches Seibei polishing a gourd during class.

   EXPLANATION The teacher thinks that playing with gourds is a waste of time and that Seibei will never do anything worthwhile. This shows the narrow outlook of adults, who cannot see a child's artistic talent. The irony is that the same gourd is later sold for six hundred yen.

CONTEXT These lines come at the end of the story, after Seibei has lost all his gourds.

EXPLANATION After his gourds were broken, Seibei found a new outlet for his talent — painting. He is completely absorbed in it and holds no grudge against the teacher or his father. But the story adds that his father has started scolding him for painting too, showing that adults still do not understand the young artist.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Artist', a short story written by the Japanese writer Shiga Naoya.

CONTEXT Seibei's father says this, showing his dislike for Seibei's hobby.

EXPLANATION The father believes collecting gourds is a childish and useless pastime. He wants his son to do something 'practical'. His words show the lack of understanding between elders and children, and how the adult world discourages a child's natural interest and talent.

ESSAY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

A Child is Born

by Germaine Greer

SUMMARY

A Child is Born is an extract from Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility by Germaine Greer, a well-known feminist writer born in Australia in 1939. In it she compares the way childbirth is handled in traditional societies of the East and in modern Western societies.

In traditional societies, birth is a big social event and an occasion of joy for the whole family. Except in rare accidents, birth is always attended by experienced women. The mother is given rest, special food and loving care, and many rituals are followed. For a young Sylheti woman of Bangladesh, the reward of pregnancy is this rest and respect, and in the joint family the children are looked after by all the relatives together.

In the West, childbirth has become a medical event. The mother is taken to a hospital and treated like a patient. She is often lonely and receives little emotional support, and after the baby comes she may feel depressed and isolated.

Greer admits that in poor traditional societies the death rate of mothers and infants is greater, because of poverty and lack of medical help. Still, she says that all technological changes cause social problems. If birth is turned from a happy personal experience into a personal disaster, a live child alone is not enough. Her message: modern medicine should keep the human warmth of traditional ways.

2. "In non-technocratic societies, except for remarkable accidents, birth is always attended." 2024
3. "If we turn birth from a climactic personal experience into a personal disaster, it matters little that the result is more likely to be a live child." 2026

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - A CHILD IS BORN

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. For a young Sylheti woman of Bangladesh, the reward of pregnancy is a visit to her mother's house for the last months of pregnancy. There she gets rest, love, special food and full care. She is free from household work and is treated with great respect by everyone.

2. Because of poverty, traditional societies lack good hospitals, trained doctors, medicines and hygiene. As a result, the death rate of mothers and infants is greater there. Poor people cannot afford modern medical care, so many lives are lost in childbirth that could easily be saved.

3. In a joint family in Bangladesh, children are looked after by the whole family, not by the mother alone. Grandparents, aunts and other relatives share the care. The children grow up in love and security, and the mother gets help and rest.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'A Child is Born' is an extract from Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility by Germaine Greer, the Australian feminist writer. In it she compares childbirth in traditional societies with childbirth in modern Western societies.

   In traditional societies, pregnancy and birth are a celebration and a joy for the whole family. The ways of managing childbirth are many and varied, but birth is always attended by experienced women. A young Sylheti woman goes to her mother's house, where she gets rest, special food and loving care. After the birth there are rituals and ceremonies, and in the joint family the whole family looks after the children.

   In the West, childbirth has become a medical event. The mother is taken to a hospital, treated like a patient and often left lonely. She gets little emotional support, and after returning home she may suffer from depression.

   Greer honestly admits that in poor traditional societies the death rate of mothers and infants is greater. But she warns that all technological changes cause social problems. If birth becomes a personal disaster instead of a joyful experience, a live child alone is not enough. She wants modern medicine to keep the warmth and family support of traditional societies.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Child is Born', an extract from Germaine Greer's book Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility.

   CONTEXT Greer begins to describe how childbirth is handled in non-Western, traditional societies.

   EXPLANATION Different traditional communities have their own customs for pregnancy and childbirth — special food, rest, rituals and ceremonies. But in all of them the mother is surrounded by family and experienced women. Birth is a social celebration, not just a medical event.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Child is Born', an extract from Germaine Greer's book Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility.

CONTEXT Greer contrasts childbirth in traditional societies with that in modern technological societies.

EXPLANATION In societies not ruled by technology, a woman is never left alone while giving birth. Experienced women and relatives are always with her to help and comfort her, unless some unusual accident happens. This shows the care and support of traditional communities.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Child is Born', an extract from Germaine Greer's book Sex and Destiny: The Politics of Human Fertility.

CONTEXT Greer criticises the cold, hospital-based way of childbirth in Western societies.

EXPLANATION Modern medicine may save more babies, but it often makes birth a lonely and painful experience for the mother. Greer says that if the joy and dignity of birth are lost, the success of producing a live child is not enough. The mother's feelings and happiness matter too.

ESSAY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

How Free is the Press

by Dorothy L. Sayers

SUMMARY

How Free is the Press is an essay by Dorothy L. Sayers (1893–1957), an English essayist, playwright, poet and writer of detective stories. In this essay she asks a sharp question: is the press really free?

When we speak of the 'freedom of the press', we usually mean freedom in a technical sense — the government does not censor newspapers in peacetime (though in time of war some control is necessary). But Sayers says this freedom is not the same as freedom to tell the truth.

The editorial policy of a daily paper is controlled by two chief factors: the proprietor and the advertisers. Advertisement is the chief source of a newspaper's revenue, so every newspaper lives in a perpetual, precarious balance. No widely read paper dares to support a policy that hurts its advertisers. Papers also mislead readers by suppressing facts, distorting news, misquoting people and printing sensational headlines, and they seldom publish corrections.

The press enjoys the helplessness of the public, because ordinary people take a free press for granted and believe what they read. Sayers advises readers to read critically, compare different papers, examine the facts before forming an opinion, and support only those papers that are truly independent.

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS

1. Are there restrictions on Press in time of war? 2022
2. What do you mean by the term 'free press'? 2024
3. What do free people take for granted? 2025

LONG ANSWER QUESTION

1. Write the summary of 'How Free is the Press'. 2025, 2023, 2020, 2017, 2011

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT

1. "Every newspaper lives in a perpetual precarious balance." (Important)

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - HOW FREE IS THE PRESS

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. Yes. In time of war the press is not fully free. The government imposes censorship, and news that may help the enemy or spread panic is not allowed. Sayers accepts that some control is necessary in wartime for the safety of the nation, but in peace the press should be free.

2. A 'free press' means newspapers that can publish news and views without control by the government. But Sayers says real freedom means freedom to tell the truth, without pressure from owners and advertisers. A press that is free in law but controlled by money is not truly free.

3. Free people take the freedom of the press for granted. They think that because there is no government censorship, whatever they read in the newspapers must be true and fair. They do not realise that the press is controlled by owners and advertisers, and that news can be twisted.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'How Free is the Press' is an essay by Dorothy L. Sayers, the English essayist and detective-story writer. In it she shows that the so-called free press is not really free.

   Sayers says that when we speak of the freedom of the press, we usually mean freedom in a technical sense — the government does not censor newspapers in peacetime. In war, some restrictions are necessary. But freedom from censorship does not mean freedom to tell the truth.

   The editorial policy of a daily paper is controlled by two chief factors — the proprietor and the advertisers. Advertisement is the chief source of a newspaper's revenue, so every newspaper lives in a perpetual, precarious balance and dares not offend its advertisers. Newspapers also mislead readers by suppression of facts, distortion, misquotation and sensational headlines, and they rarely print corrections or letters that expose their mistakes.

   The press enjoys the helplessness of the public, because ordinary readers take a free press for granted. Sayers advises readers to be alert: read critically, compare different newspapers, examine facts before forming an opinion, and support only truly independent papers. A free press is valuable only when the readers are wise.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from the essay 'How Free is the Press' written by Dorothy L. Sayers.

   CONTEXT Sayers explains how money controls the editorial policy of newspapers.

   EXPLANATION A newspaper depends on advertisers for most of its income and on readers for its circulation. It must please both and cannot offend anyone powerful. So it is always in a risky, unstable position, like a man walking on a rope. Because of this, it cannot freely tell the whole truth.

STORY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

The Earth

by H.E. Bates

SUMMARY

The Earth is a short story by H.E. Bates (1905–1974), an English writer famous for his stories of country life. It is the story of a poor farmer, Johnson, his wife and their only son Benjy, who seems to be a simple-minded boy.

Benjy's parents love him deeply and cherish a silent belief that their land will one day lift them out of poverty. On a doctor's advice that the boy should be given some work to look after, they start him on hens — about a dozen at first. Benjy knew nothing about the stock-market, but he knew everything about a hen. Slowly his mind grows sharp and he becomes an expert poultry-man. The business grows, he buys a Ford van and earns a lot of money.

The parents save money for him and plan a ceremony for his twenty-first birthday. When they hand him the passbook, he silently pockets it without a word of thanks. Benjy becomes more and more selfish. He wants to buy land, and he secretly buys the very land his father had rented from Sanders.

Later, against his parents' wishes, he marries Florence, one of his employees. Finally he drives his old parents away from their home. Left alone on the pavement, "looking at the ground", they realise how badly they were deceived. The story shows how greed and selfishness can destroy family love, and how blind trust can bring tragedy.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - THE EARTH

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. Benjy's parents silently believed that the land was their real wealth and security. They hoped that through hard work, and through Benjy's growing business, they would one day own their land, live comfortably and be free from poverty in their old age.

2. The doctor advised Benjy's parents to give him some work of his own to look after, such as keeping hens. He felt that responsibility would sharpen Benjy's mind. So his parents gave him about a dozen hens, and his poultry business grew rapidly.

3. Benjy wanted to use his money to buy land and expand his poultry business for himself. He did not want to share it with his parents. Secretly, he bought the very land his father had rented from Sanders, which showed his greed and selfishness.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1. 'The Earth' is a short story by H.E. Bates, the English writer of country life. It shows how greed can destroy the love between parents and their son.

   Johnson was a poor farmer who lived with his wife and their only son, Benjy. Benjy seemed to be a simple-minded boy. On a doctor's advice, his parents gave him about a dozen hens to look after. Benjy knew nothing about the stock-market, but he knew everything about a hen. His poultry business grew fast, he bought a Ford van and began to earn a lot of money.

   His parents cherished a silent belief that their land would one day make them happy and secure. On Benjy's twenty-first birthday they handed him a passbook full of savings, but he pocketed it without a word of thanks. Slowly his simplicity turned into cunning. He secretly bought the land his father had rented from Sanders and married Florence, a maid on the farm, against his parents' wishes. He even made his parents eat in the kitchen.

   In the end Benjy drove his old parents away from their home. Left alone on the pavement, looking at the ground, they realised their son had betrayed them. The story teaches that greed and selfishness destroy family love.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Earth', a short story written by H.E. Bates.

CONTEXT The writer describes Benjy's nature and his skill in the poultry business.

EXPLANATION Benjy was not clever in worldly matters like business, money or the stock-market. But in rearing hens he was an expert — he knew how to feed, care for and sell them. This one skill made his business grow, and later his simplicity turned into cunning and greed.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Earth', a short story written by H.E. Bates.

CONTEXT These lines come at the end of the story, when Benjy drives his parents away.

EXPLANATION Benjy left his old parents on the pavement and drove away in his van. They stood helpless, ashamed and heartbroken, staring at the ground. They had sacrificed everything for their son, but he betrayed them. The scene shows the tragic result of Benjy's greed.

TRAVELOGUE - RAINBOW (PART 2)

India Through a Traveller's Eyes

by Pearl S. Buck

SUMMARY

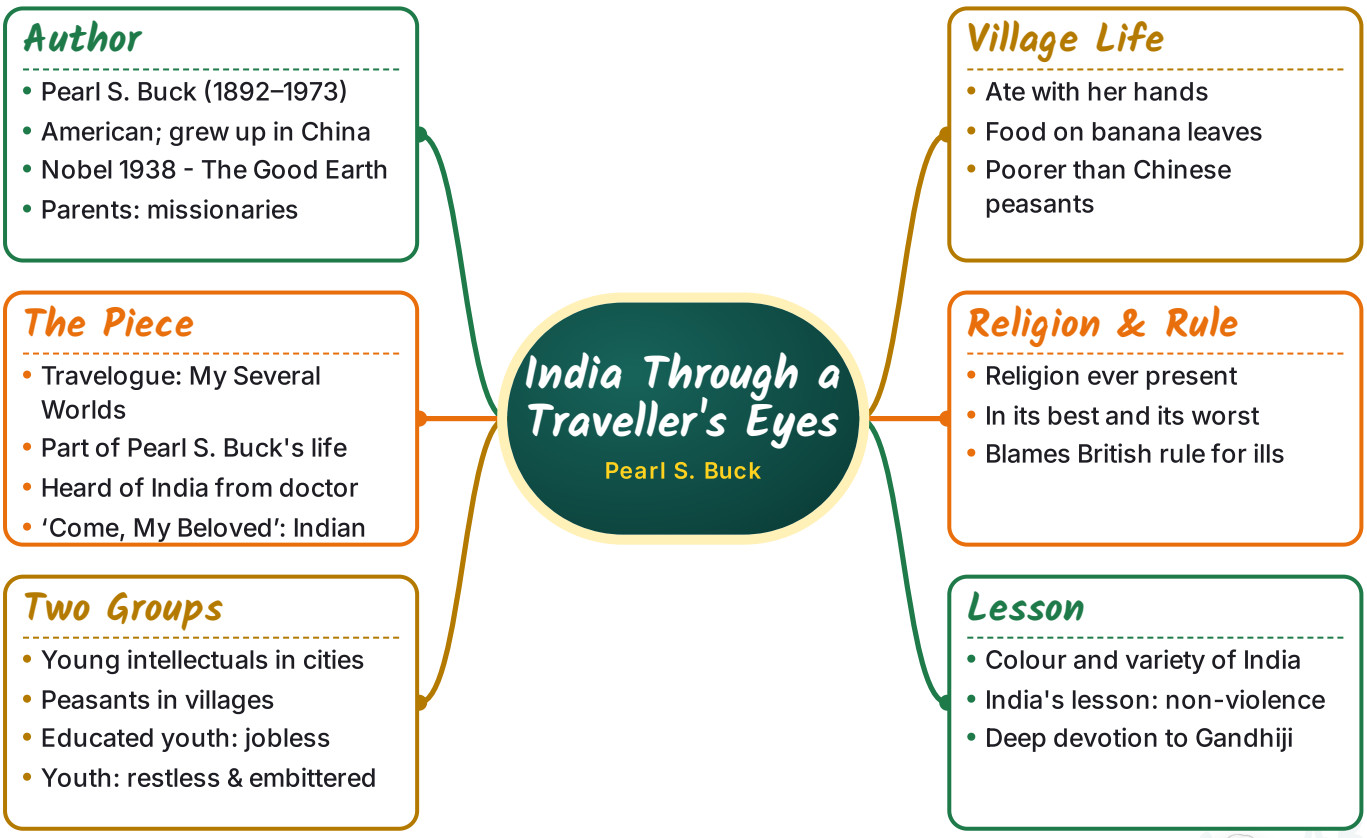

India Through a Traveller's Eyes is taken from 'My Several Worlds', a personal record by Pearl S. Buck (1892–1973), the American writer who grew up in China and won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1938. Here she gives her honest impressions of India as a sympathetic traveller.

She says her life has been too crowded with travels and people to put it all in one book, but India has always been a part of her background. As a child she heard about India from their family doctor and his wife, who were Indians, and she learnt about Buddhism and the life of Lord Buddha. She did not come to see the Taj Mahal or Fatehpur Sikri; she came to see and listen to two groups of people — the young intellectuals in the cities and the peasants in the villages.

She found thousands of English-trained young intellectuals jobless, restless and embittered. She stayed with an Indian family in a village, ate with her hands, food served on banana leaves, and did not mind that her host ate in the opposite corner of the room. She found Indian peasants poorer than their Chinese counterparts, and for most of India's ills she blames British rule. She also observes that religion is ever present in Indian life, in its best as well as in its worst.

Indians revere their great men and women and have a deep devotion to Gandhiji. Her novel 'Come, My Beloved', set in India, was not much appreciated by Americans, but Indian readers understood it. She believes India has a great lesson to teach the world — the lesson of non-violence.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - INDIA THROUGH A TRAVELLER'S EYES

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. According to Pearl S. Buck, India's great lesson for the West is the lesson of non-violence. The West believes in power and force, but India, through Mahatma Gandhi, showed that a nation can struggle for its rights through peace, truth and tolerance. The world can learn this lesson from India.

2. The writer knew that her host followed his religious custom, which did not allow him to eat together with a foreigner. It was not a sign of disrespect. Pearl S. Buck had grown up in Asia and understood such customs, so she respected his belief and did not mind it at all.

3. English rule gave India some benefits. It brought the whole country under one administration, and educated Indians of different regions got English as a common language. Railways, roads, posts and modern education also came with it. But the writer feels that these benefits did not remove the poverty of the people.

4. The writer means that religion is a part of every moment of Indian life — eating, dressing, festivals and social relations. At its best it gives people faith, patience and tolerance. At its worst it creates superstition, caste divisions and quarrels. Both sides of religion can be seen in India.

5. The young intellectuals were educated and aware of the progress of the world. They wanted freedom, jobs and a better life for their country. But under foreign rule they had little power or opportunity and saw poverty all around. So they felt frustrated, restless and bitter.

6. Pearl S. Buck, herself the daughter of missionaries, valued the missionaries' service in schools and hospitals. But she felt that India's religious life is very old and deep, and that preaching one faith as superior could not win the Indian heart. Respect and understanding mattered more than conversion.

LONG ANSWER QUESTION - ANSWER

1 'India Through a Traveller's Eyes' is taken from 'My Several Worlds' by Pearl S. Buck, the American writer who grew up in China and won the Nobel Prize in 1938. In it she records her impressions of India.

The writer says her life has been too crowded with travels and people to put it all in one book. India has always been a part of her background, and her novel 'Come, My Beloved' has an Indian background. She went to India to see and listen to two groups of people — the young intellectuals in the cities and the peasants in the villages.

She found the intellectuals restless and embittered. In the villages she stayed with an Indian family, ate with her hands, the food served on banana leaves, and did not mind that her host ate in the opposite corner of the room. The Indian peasants were even poorer than the Chinese peasants, and she blamed British rule for most of India's ills. She noticed that religion is ever present in Indian life, in its best as well as in its worst.

The writer loves the colour and variety of Indian life. She feels that India has a great lesson to teach the world — the lesson of non-violence. The piece shows her deep sympathy and respect for India.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'India Through a Traveller's Eyes', a prose piece written by Pearl S. Buck.

CONTEXT The writer shares her impressions of the place of religion in Indian life.

EXPLANATION Religion touches every part of Indian life — food, dress, festivals and daily habits. At its best it gives people faith, patience and tolerance; at its worst it leads to superstition, caste divisions and conflict. The writer sees both sides honestly.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'India Through a Traveller's Eyes', a prose piece written by Pearl S. Buck.

CONTEXT At the beginning the writer explains why she cannot write about all her experiences.

EXPLANATION Pearl S. Buck travelled to many countries and met a great many people. Her experiences are so rich and varied that one book cannot hold them all. So she chooses to write only some of them, and here she writes about India, which has always been part of her background.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'India Through a Traveller's Eyes', a prose piece written by Pearl S. Buck.

CONTEXT The writer tells the purpose of her visit to India.

EXPLANATION She wanted to know the real India, so she chose two groups: the young intellectuals in the cities, who were restless and embittered, and the peasants in the villages, who were very poor. She wanted to see and listen to them with an open mind.

ONE-ACT PLAY - RAINBOW (PART 2)

A Marriage Proposal

by Anton Chekhov

SUMMARY

A Marriage Proposal is a one-act farcical comedy by Anton Chekhov (1860–1904), the Russian dramatist and short-story writer who was a doctor by profession. It laughs at human pride, greed and quarrelsome nature.

Ivan Vassilevitch Lomov, a 35-year-old landowner, is nervous and always worried about his health — he suffers from palpitations. He comes in evening dress to the house of his neighbour Stepan Stepanovitch Choobookov, also a landowner, to propose to his daughter Natalia Stepanovna. Choobookov is delighted and sends Natalia in.

But before Lomov can propose, he mentions "my Oxen Meadows". Natalia insists the meadows belong to her family, and a fierce quarrel begins. Choobookov joins in, insults are exchanged and Lomov leaves in a rage. When Natalia learns that Lomov had come to propose, she becomes hysterical and begs her father to bring him back.

Lomov returns, but now they quarrel over whose dog is better — Lomov's Guess or Natalia's Squeezer (called Leap in some books). Lomov faints, Choobookov thinks he is dead, but he recovers. Choobookov quickly joins their hands, and the couple start quarrelling again even as he shouts for champagne.

1. Why does Lomov think that he is at a critical age? 2026
2. Why did Lomov come to Choobookov's house?
3. What was the quarrel about the Oxen Meadows?
4. Why did Natalia want Lomov to come back?

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS

1. Write the summary of 'A Marriage Proposal'. 2017

2 Sketch the character of Lomov.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT

1 "You two'd better hurry up and get married... Just do me a favour and leave me in peace."
2025, 2023, 2019

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - A MARRIAGE PROPOSAL

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 Lomov is thirty-five years old. He feels that this is a critical age, as he must marry now and settle down to a quiet and regular life. He is a nervous man who suffers from palpitations and sleeplessness, so he thinks he cannot wait any longer to find a wife.

2 Lomov came to Choobookov's house in evening dress to propose marriage to his daughter, Natalia. He thought she was a good housekeeper, not bad-looking and well-educated, and that marrying her would give him the quiet, settled life he wanted.

3 The Oxen Meadows lay between the lands of Lomov and Choobookov. Lomov said the meadows belonged to him, while Natalia insisted they belonged to her family. The land was not very valuable, but both were too proud to give way, and the talk turned into a bitter quarrel.

4 When Lomov left in a rage, Choobookov told Natalia that Lomov had come to propose to her. Natalia had not known this. She became hysterical, as she wanted to marry him, and begged her father to bring him back at once.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'A Marriage Proposal' is a one-act farcical comedy by the Russian writer Anton Chekhov. It makes fun of human pride and our habit of quarrelling over small things.

Lomov, a nervous landowner of 35 who suffers from palpitations, comes in evening dress to his neighbour Choobookov to propose to his daughter Natalia. Choobookov is very happy and sends his daughter to him.

Lomov begins to talk, but when he mentions "my Oxen Meadows", Natalia claims the meadows belong to her family. A hot quarrel breaks out. Choobookov joins in, both sides insult each other and Lomov leaves. When Natalia learns that he had come to propose, she cries and asks her father to bring him back.

Lomov returns, but now they quarrel over their dogs — Lomov's Guess and Natalia's Squeezer. Lomov gets so excited that he faints, and Choobookov thinks he is dead. When he recovers, Choobookov quickly joins their hands and gives his blessing. Even then the couple keep quarrelling about the dogs while Choobookov calls for champagne. The play shows, with humour, how pride and temper spoil even the happiest moments.

2 Lomov is the hero of Chekhov's comedy 'A Marriage Proposal'. He is a landowner of thirty-five and a neighbour of Choobookov.

He is a nervous and timid man. He is always worried about his health and complains of palpitations, a numb foot and sleeplessness. He wants to marry not out of love but because he needs a quiet and regular life.

He is also proud and quick-tempered. He cannot give up even a small piece of land like the Oxen Meadows, or admit that Natalia's dog may be better than his Guess. He is conscious of his social class and family name, and he gets so excited in quarrels that he faints.

Through Lomov, Chekhov laughs at people who make a great fuss over small matters. He is a comic but lovable character.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'A Marriage Proposal', a one-act play written by Anton Chekhov.

CONTEXT These words are spoken by Choobookov near the end of the play, when Lomov recovers from his fainting fit.

EXPLANATION Choobookov is tired of the endless quarrels between Lomov and Natalia. He wants them to marry at once so that he can have some peace. The humour lies in the fact that even after the engagement the couple begin to quarrel again about their dogs.

METAPHYSICAL LOVE POEM - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe

by John Donne

ABOUT THE POET

John Donne (1572–1631) was an English poet, lawyer and later a famous preacher, Dean of St Paul's Cathedral, London. He is the leading Metaphysical poet, known for clever arguments, surprising comparisons (conceits) and a mix of passion and logic. His poems, such as the Songs and Sonnets and the Holy Sonnets, were mostly published after his death in 1633.

CENTRAL IDEA

The poem is a tender farewell from a lover to his beloved. He assures her that his going is only a short, temporary parting, not a sign of tired love. Like the Sun that sets and rises again, he will return quickly. Since true lovers live in each other's hearts, separation cannot really part them, so she should not weep or fear.

SUMMARY

In this song, John Donne speaks to his beloved before leaving on a journey. He tells her that he is not going because he is tired of her, nor because he hopes to find a better love somewhere else. Since death is certain for everyone, he wants to get used to it in a light way, through small 'pretended deaths' like this parting.

He reminds her that the Sun went away last night and has come back today, though it has no feeling and a much longer way to travel. He, having more reasons (wings and spurs) to come back, will return even faster. He then sadly notes how feeble man's power is: we cannot add one more hour to our good luck, nor bring back a lost hour.

He begs her not to sigh or weep, because her sighs blow away his soul and her tears waste his life-blood. If she loves him, her grief only hurts him. She should not imagine any harm coming to him. They are only turned aside to sleep for a while; those who keep each other alive in their hearts are never really parted.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- John Donne (1572–1631) was an English poet and preacher, the leader of the Metaphysical poets.
- He studied law and also read theology; later he became Dean of St Paul's Cathedral, London.
- The poem is a 'valediction' (farewell song) addressed to his beloved/wife before he leaves on a journey.
- He says he is not going because he is tired of her, nor in hope of finding a better love.
- Death is certain, so short partings are like 'feigned deaths' — practice for the final one.
- He compares his journey to the Sun's: the Sun set yesterday and is back today; he will return even faster.
- Man's power is feeble: he cannot add one hour to good fortune or call back a lost hour.
- Her sighs and tears hurt him — she sighs his soul away; lovers who keep each other alive in their hearts are never truly parted.

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The poet says he is not leaving because he is tired of his beloved, nor because he hopes to find a better love elsewhere. He has to go on a journey, and he treats this short parting as a 'pretended death' that prepares him for the real death, which is certain for all.

Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe (continued)

2 The Sun set last night and has risen again today, though it has no feelings and a long way to go. The poet says he has more love and reasons to return, so like the Sun he will surely come back, and even faster. So his beloved should not fear.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe' is a farewell song by the Metaphysical poet John Donne. The poet is about to go on a journey and comforts his sad beloved.

He says he is not leaving because he is tired of her or because he wants a better love. Death is certain, so he wants to get used to it through small 'pretended deaths' like this parting. He compares himself with the Sun, which went away last night and is back today. Having more love to pull him back, he will return even more quickly.

He feels that man's power is very weak: we cannot add an hour to good fortune or bring back a lost hour. He asks her not to sigh or weep, because her sighs take away his soul and her tears waste his life-blood. Her sorrow only harms him.

At last he tells her not to imagine any danger. They are only turned aside to sleep for a while. Lovers who keep each other alive in their hearts are never truly parted. The poem shows deep love, faith and hope.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe', written by John Donne.

CONTEXT The poet is leaving on a journey and his beloved is sad and sighing. He asks her not to grieve.

EXPLANATION The poet says that her sighs are not just air. Since their souls are one, every sigh of hers blows away a part of his soul. Her sorrow hurts him, so she should stay calm and cheerful.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe', written by John Donne.

CONTEXT The poet compares his own journey with the daily journey of the Sun to assure his beloved of his return.

EXPLANATION The Sun has no desire or feeling and travels a far longer way, yet it comes back every day. The poet has love and desire to return, so she need not fear: he will come back even sooner.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe', written by John Donne.

CONTEXT The poet comforts his beloved before leaving on a journey.

EXPLANATION He points out that the Sun set last night and has risen again today. In the same way, his going away is only for a short time, and he will surely return to her.

POEM 2

FREE VERSE - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Song of Myself

by Walt Whitman

ABOUT THE POET

Walt Whitman (1819–1892) was an American poet, journalist and essayist, often called the 'father of free verse'. His life's work, Leaves of Grass (first edition 1855), celebrates democracy, nature, the body and the common man. His long, unrhymed lines broke the rules of traditional poetry.

CENTRAL IDEA

In 'Song of Myself' the poet celebrates himself, but his 'self' stands for every human being, since every atom of him belongs to all. Born of this soil and air, healthy at thirty-seven, he resolves to sing till death. Putting aside creeds and schools of thought, he lets Nature speak freely through him with its original energy.

SUMMARY

'Song of Myself' is taken from Walt Whitman's famous book Leaves of Grass (1855). In these opening lines the poet says, 'I celebrate myself, and sing myself.' This is not pride. He believes that whatever he thinks the reader will also think, because every atom of his body belongs to the reader as well. All human beings are one.

The poet relaxes and invites his soul. He leans at ease and observes a spear of summer grass — a simple, humble part of nature. He says that his tongue and every atom of his blood are formed from this soil and this air. He was born here of parents born here, and so were their parents.

Now, at thirty-seven, in perfect health, he begins his song and hopes not to stop till death. He keeps all religious creeds and schools of thought aside for a while, without forgetting them. He allows himself to speak boldly, at every risk, letting Nature speak without check, with original energy.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Walt Whitman (1819–1892) was an American poet, called the 'father of free verse'.
- 'Song of Myself' is from his famous collection Leaves of Grass, first published in 1855.
- The speaker is the poet himself; he celebrates himself and, through himself, every human being.
- Every atom of his body belongs equally to the reader — all people are one.
- He loafs at ease, observing a spear of summer grass.
- His tongue and every atom of his blood are formed from this soil and this air.
- He is thirty-seven, in perfect health, and hopes not to stop singing till death.
- He keeps creeds and schools aside and lets Nature speak 'without check with original energy'.

2. What has formed the speaker's blood? 2026A

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS

1. Write the summary of Song of Myself. 2011A, 2014A, 2017A, 2021A, 2023A

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT

1. And What I assume you shall assume,— for every atom belonging to me as good belongs to you. 2019A, 2021A

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - SONG OF MYSELF

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The speaker relaxes at ease, invites his soul and observes a spear (blade) of summer grass. This tiny, ordinary thing of nature shows his love for simple natural life and his feeling of oneness with everything around him.

2. The speaker says that his tongue and every atom of his blood are formed from this soil and this air. He was born here of parents born here, and so were their parents. So he feels deeply rooted in his land and nature.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'Song of Myself' is written by the American poet Walt Whitman. It is taken from his famous book Leaves of Grass (1855). It is written in free verse.

The poet begins, 'I celebrate myself, and sing myself.' He is not proud. He believes that what he thinks, the reader will also think, because every atom of his body belongs to the reader too. In this way his 'self' stands for all human beings.

He relaxes and observes a spear of summer grass. He says his tongue and every atom of his blood are formed from this soil and air. He and his parents and their parents were all born here. Now, at thirty-seven and in perfect health, he begins his song and hopes not to stop till death.

He keeps religious creeds and schools of thought aside for a while, without forgetting them. He speaks freely at every risk and lets Nature speak without check, with original energy. The poem celebrates the self, nature, equality and freedom.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Song of Myself', written by Walt Whitman.

CONTEXT These lines come at the very beginning of the poem, where the poet says he celebrates and sings of himself.

EXPLANATION The poet says that whatever he believes, the reader will also believe, because all human beings are made of the same atoms. Every atom of his body belongs equally to the reader. So when he celebrates himself, he really celebrates all mankind — his self is the universal self.

MODERN LYRIC - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast

by W.H. Auden

ABOUT THE POET

Wystan Hugh Auden (1907–1973) was born in York, England, and became an American citizen in 1946. He was a leading modern poet of the 1930s. His works include 'Look, Stranger!', 'Another Time' and 'The Age of Anxiety', which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1948.

CENTRAL IDEA

Life is short and passes quickly, like leaves falling in autumn. Human beings grow old, lose their joy and move towards death. Modern life is cold, joyless and full of frustration. The poet shows a dark, pessimistic picture, though far ahead there is a mountain and a waterfall that could bless travellers at the end of their journey.

SUMMARY

In this poem W.H. Auden describes autumn, when leaves fall fast and flowers that bloomed with nurses' care do not last. The nurses go to their graves, yet the prams keep rolling on: one generation dies and another follows.

Unkind neighbours whisper on the left and drag us away from real joy. Our active hands freeze, lying lonely on our knees, and we are held down by frustrations. Dead people walk behind us like ghosts, and trolls run scolding for their food. In the cold winter woods the nightingale is dumb and the angel will not come.

Still, far ahead, cold and impossible to reach, a mountain lifts its lovely head. Its white waterfall could bless travellers in their last distress. The poem shows that life moves steadily towards death, and only a distant hope of peace remains.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- W.H. Auden (1907–1973) was an English-born poet who later became an American citizen.
- He won the Pulitzer Prize in 1948 for 'The Age of Anxiety'.
- The poem uses falling leaves and the coming winter to show decay, loss and the emptiness of modern life.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - NOW THE LEAVES ARE FALLING FAST

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The woods are cold and frozen because winter has come. The leaves have fallen, the trees are bare and the nightingale is dumb. Trolls run about scolding for food and the angel will not come. The woods show a lifeless, joyless and gloomy world.

Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast (continued)

2 The 'whispering neighbours' are the unkind people around us who gossip and spread negative talk. They pull us away from real joy and happiness. The poet suggests that such people make our life sad and keep us from living fully.

3 Far ahead stands a cold, high mountain with a white waterfall. The poet says this waterfall could bless travellers in their last distress. It stands for hope, peace and perhaps salvation at the end of life's hard journey, though it is far and difficult to reach.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast' is a short poem by W.H. Auden. It uses the picture of autumn, when leaves fall quickly, to show how short and sad human life is.

The flowers that nurses cared for do not last long. The nurses go to their graves, but the prams keep rolling on: old people die and new children are born. Unkind, whispering neighbours drag us away from true joy. Our active hands freeze, lying lonely on our knees, and we are held down by frustrations.

The dead walk behind us, and trolls run about scolding for food. In the cold, bare woods the nightingale is dumb and the angel does not come. Everything shows decay, loneliness and the coming of death.

Yet the poem ends with a little hope. Far ahead, cold and hard to reach, a mountain lifts its lovely head, and its white waterfall could bless travellers in their last distress. The poem's tone is gloomy and pessimistic, but it points to peace at the end of life's journey.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast', written by W.H. Auden.

CONTEXT After showing decay, loneliness and death in the cold winter woods, the poet ends the poem with a distant picture of hope.

EXPLANATION Far ahead stands a mountain, cold and almost impossible to reach. It raises its beautiful peak, and its white waterfall could bring blessing and relief to travellers at the end of their tiring journey. The mountain and waterfall stand for hope, peace or salvation at the end of life.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast', written by W.H. Auden.

CONTEXT The poet compares human life to leaves that fall fast in autumn.

EXPLANATION The nurses who once pushed prams and cared for children have grown old and died. But the prams still roll on, carrying new babies. One generation passes away and another takes its place. Life goes on, but every person moves steadily towards death.

ROMANTIC ODE - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Ode to Autumn

by John Keats

ABOUT THE POET

John Keats (1795–1821) was an English Romantic poet, famous for his love of beauty and rich sensuous imagery. His great odes include 'Ode to a Nightingale', 'Ode on a Grecian Urn' and 'To Autumn', written in 1819. He died of tuberculosis in Rome at the age of 25.

CENTRAL IDEA

Autumn is a season of fruitfulness and ripeness. It comes after summer departs and has its own beauty and music, just like spring. Through a series of rich pictures the poet shows the principle of maturity in nature, and teaches that every season, and every stage of life, has its own value.

SUMMARY

In 'Ode to Autumn' John Keats, a Romantic poet, calls autumn the season of mists and mellow fruitfulness and a close friend of the maturing sun. Together they load the vines with grapes, bend the moss'd cottage-trees with apples, fill every fruit with ripeness, swell the gourd and plump the hazel shells. Late flowers bloom for the bees, who think warm days will never end.

Autumn is then shown as a person: sitting carelessly on a granary floor, sleeping in a half-reaped field, crossing a brook like a gleaner, or watching by a cider-press, where it watches the last oozings hours by hours.

The poet tells autumn not to think of the songs of spring, because it has its own music: gnats mourn by the river, lambs bleat, crickets sing, the red-breast whistles from a garden-croft and gathering swallows twitter in the skies. Autumn begins with the departure of summer, and the poem shows the principle of maturity in nature.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- John Keats (1795–1821) was an English Romantic poet.
- The poem follows the classical form of an ode.
- It celebrates the beauty and richness of autumn while reflecting on the passing of time.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - ODE TO AUTUMN

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 In the poem's cycle of seasons, autumn comes after summer departs, and summer itself follows spring. Spring has its songs, but Keats says autumn has its own music too. All three seasons are links in one chain: spring brings bloom, summer brings growth and autumn brings ripeness and fruitfulness.

2 In autumn fruits become fully ripe: apples bend the trees, grapes load the vines, gourds swell and hazel nuts fill out. Late flowers bloom for the bees. Harvest is gathered and cider is pressed. Gnats, lambs, crickets, the red-breast and gathering swallows fill the air with autumn's own music.

1 'Ode to Autumn' is a famous ode by the Romantic poet John Keats. It praises autumn as the season of mists and mellow fruitfulness.

In the first stanza, autumn and its close friend, the maturing sun, work together. They load the vines with grapes, bend the mossy cottage-trees with apples, fill all fruit with ripeness, swell the gourd and plump the hazel shells. Late flowers keep blooming, and the bees think warm days will never end.

In the second stanza autumn is shown as a person. It sits carelessly on a granary floor, sleeps in a half-reaped field, carries grain across a brook like a gleaner, and patiently watches the last oozings of the cider-press hour by hour.

In the last stanza the poet asks autumn not to miss the songs of spring, because it has its own music: gnats mourn, lambs bleat, crickets sing, the red-breast whistles and swallows gather and twitter in the sky. The poem shows that every season, like every stage of life, has its own beauty and maturity.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Ode to Autumn', written by John Keats.

CONTEXT In the last stanza the poet tells autumn not to think of the songs of spring, because autumn has its own music.

EXPLANATION The robin (red-breast) whistles sweetly from a small garden plot, and swallows gather in groups and twitter in the sky as they get ready to fly away before winter. These sounds are part of autumn's own music. The lines show that autumn, too, is full of beauty and life, though it also hints that winter is near.

SHORT LYRIC - EPITAPH - RAINBOW (PART 2)

An Epitaph

by Walter de la Mare

ABOUT THE POET

Walter de la Mare (1873–1956) was an English poet, short-story writer and novelist, born at Charlton in Kent. He is known for dreamy, musical and mysterious poems such as 'The Listeners' and for many poems for children ('Songs of Childhood', 'Peacock Pie'). He received the Order of Merit in 1953.

CENTRAL IDEA

'An Epitaph' shows that beauty and life are short. The poet stands at the grave of a lady who was light of step and heart and perhaps the most beautiful lady of the West Country. Yet her beauty has passed away, and when the poet himself dies, no one will remember her. Nothing beautiful lasts forever.

SUMMARY

An epitaph is a short line written on a tomb in memory of the dead. In this 8-line poem, Walter de la Mare writes such an epitaph for a lady buried in the West Country of England. He says that here lies a most beautiful lady; she was light of step and heart — she walked gracefully and was always cheerful.

The poet thinks she was the most beautiful lady that ever lived in the West Country. But then he gives a sad truth: beauty vanishes, beauty passes, however rare it may be. Even the rarest beauty cannot escape time and death.

In the last lines the poet asks, "And when I crumble, who will remember this lady of the West Country?" Here 'I' is the poet himself. Only he remembers her now; when he too dies and turns to dust, her memory will be lost forever. The poem is short, simple and full of quiet sadness about the transience (short life) of beauty.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Walter de la Mare (1873–1956) was an English poet, short-story writer and novelist, born in Kent.
- He was honoured with the Order of Merit in 1953; he belongs to the 20th century.
- He wrote many poems for children (e.g. 'Songs of Childhood', 'Peacock Pie'); 'The Listeners' is his best-known poem.
- 'An Epitaph' is a short 8-line poem written as if carved on the grave of a beautiful lady of the West Country.
- Theme: beauty, however rare, fades and passes away; death and time spare nothing — even the poet's memory of her will end when he dies.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - AN EPITAPH

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. When the poet dies ('crumbles'), no one will remember the beautiful lady of the West Country. At present only the poet keeps her memory alive. After his death her beauty and her memory will both be lost forever. This shows that time destroys beauty and memory alike.
2. The poet thinks that beauty is short-lived. However rare and wonderful it may be, beauty vanishes and passes away with time. The lady was the most beautiful in the West Country, yet she is now in her grave. Nothing beautiful in this world lasts forever.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'An Epitaph' is a short poem by Walter de la Mare. An epitaph is a few lines written on a grave in memory of the dead person. Here the poet writes an epitaph for a beautiful lady of the West Country of England.

He says that a most beautiful lady lies in this grave. She was light of step and light of heart — graceful in her walk and cheerful in nature. The poet believes she was the most beautiful lady who ever lived in the West Country.

Then he states a sad truth: beauty vanishes and passes away, however rare it may be. Death takes away even the rarest beauty.

In the end the poet wonders who will remember this lady when he himself crumbles into dust. Only he remembers her now; after his death her memory too will vanish. The poem thus tells us that beauty, life and even memory are short-lived.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'An Epitaph', written by Walter de la Mare.

CONTEXT The poet is standing at the grave of a lady of the West Country and writing an epitaph in her memory.

EXPLANATION The poet praises the dead lady's beauty. He feels she was the most beautiful lady who ever lived in the West Country of England. The praise prepares us for the sad truth that follows: even such rare beauty could not escape death.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'An Epitaph', written by Walter de la Mare.

CONTEXT These are the opening lines of the poem, written like words carved on a tomb.

EXPLANATION The poet says that a very beautiful lady is buried here. She was 'light of step' — she walked gracefully — and 'light of heart' — she was cheerful and carefree. Her beauty of body and of nature now lies in the grave, showing that life and beauty do not last.

WAR SONNET - PATRIOTIC POEM - RAINBOW (PART 2)

The Soldier

by Rupert Brooke

ABOUT THE POET

Rupert Brooke (1887–1915) was an English poet born at Rugby and educated at Rugby School and King's College, Cambridge. He joined the Royal Navy in World War I and wrote patriotic war sonnets, the most famous being 'The Soldier'. He died of an infection in 1915 on his way to Gallipoli and lies buried on the Greek island of Skyros.

CENTRAL IDEA

'The Soldier' expresses deep love for one's motherland. A young English soldier says that if he dies in a foreign land, that spot will become 'forever England', because his body was made, nourished and blessed by England. Even after death his spirit will give back the goodness England gave him. Death for the country is seen as noble, not fearful.

SUMMARY

'The Soldier' by Rupert Brooke is a patriotic sonnet written at the start of World War I (1914). A young English soldier speaks about his possible death in battle. He says that if he dies, people should think only this of him: some corner of a foreign field where he is buried will be forever England.

In that rich earth there will be a richer dust concealed (hidden) — his body, which England bore, shaped and made aware. England gave him her flowers to love and her ways to roam; he breathed English air, was washed by English rivers and blessed by English suns. So his dust is precious.

In the sestet the soldier imagines his heart, freed from all evil, becoming a pulse in the eternal mind. It will give back the sights, sounds, happy dreams, laughter learnt of friends and gentleness that England gave him, in hearts at peace, under an English heaven. The soldier is not afraid of death; he sees it as a noble gift to his motherland.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Rupert Brooke (1887–1915) was an English poet, remembered as a war poet of World War I.
- 'The Soldier' (1914) is the last of his five '1914' war sonnets; it was published in '1914 and Other Poems' (1915).
- It is a sonnet of 14 lines: an octave (8 lines) and a sestet (6 lines).
- The poem is full of love and praise for England; a soldier imagines dying in a foreign land.
- Brooke died in 1915 on his way to Gallipoli and was buried on the Greek island of Skyros.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - THE SOLDIER

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The soldier wants to be remembered as a true son of England. He says that the corner of the foreign field where he is buried will become 'forever England'. His body, shaped and nourished by England, will make that earth richer. People should think of him with pride, not sorrow.

The Soldier (continued)

2 No, the speaker is not afraid of death. He talks about dying in a foreign land calmly and proudly. He feels that death for his motherland is noble. Even after death his spirit will give back to England the love, laughter and gentleness she gave him.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'The Soldier' is a famous sonnet by Rupert Brooke, written in 1914 at the beginning of World War I. It is full of love for England. The speaker is a young English soldier who is going to fight in a foreign land.

He says that if he dies, people should think only one thing about him: the corner of the foreign field where he lies will be 'forever England'. That rich earth will hide a richer dust — his body. England gave birth to it, shaped it and made it aware. She gave him flowers to love and ways to roam; he breathed English air, bathed in English rivers and was blessed by English suns.

In the last six lines he says that his heart, free from all evil, will become a pulse in the eternal mind. It will give back the thoughts, sights, sounds and happy dreams England gave him, the laughter learnt from friends and gentleness, in hearts at peace under an English heaven.

Thus the poem shows deep patriotism. The soldier does not fear death; he sees dying for his country as a noble and peaceful gift.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Soldier', written by Rupert Brooke.

CONTEXT A young English soldier going to fight in World War I speaks about the possibility of his death in a foreign land.

EXPLANATION The soldier tells his countrymen not to grieve if he dies. They should think only that the spot in a foreign field where he is buried will always be a part of England, because an Englishman lies there. The lines show his deep love and pride for his country.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Soldier', written by Rupert Brooke.

CONTEXT The soldier explains why his dust will be precious: everything he is came from England.

EXPLANATION England gave him her flowers to love and her paths to wander on. His body belongs to England and grew up breathing English air. So he owes his whole life to his motherland, and his dust will carry England with it.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'The Soldier', written by Rupert Brooke.

CONTEXT The soldier imagines his body buried in a foreign field after he dies in battle.

EXPLANATION The foreign earth is already rich, but his body ('dust') hidden in it will make it richer. That body was born, shaped and made aware by England. The lines show the soldier's pride that an English body adds value even to foreign soil.

4 REFERENCE These are the closing lines of 'The Soldier', written by Rupert Brooke.

CONTEXT The soldier says that after death his spirit will give back all the good things England gave him.

EXPLANATION The soldier remembers the laughter he learnt from friends and the gentleness he found in England. His purified spirit will return these gifts, living on in peaceful hearts under an English sky. The poem ends on a note of calm, peace and love for the motherland.

HUMOROUS NARRATIVE POEM - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Macavity: The Mystery Cat

by T.S. Eliot

ABOUT THE POET

Thomas Stearns Eliot (1888–1965) was born in St. Louis, Missouri (USA) and settled in England in 1914, becoming a British citizen in 1927. He is one of the greatest modern poets, known for 'The Waste Land' (1922) and 'Four Quartets', and won the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1948. His light verse 'Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats' later inspired the musical 'Cats'.

CENTRAL IDEA

Through Macavity, a clever ginger cat who commits every kind of crime but is never caught, Eliot gently mocks the master-criminals of detective stories. Macavity always has an alibi and is never at the scene of the crime. Under the fun, the poem shows how cunning wrongdoers escape the law while the police stay baffled.

SUMMARY

'Macavity: The Mystery Cat' is a humorous poem from Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats (1939). Macavity is called the Hidden Paw. He is a master criminal who breaks every human law and even the law of gravity, yet he is never caught. Scotland Yard and the Flying Squad are baffled, because whenever they reach the scene of a crime, 'Macavity's not there!'

The poet describes him closely: a tall, thin ginger cat with sunken eyes, a brow deeply lined with thought, a highly domed head, a dusty coat and uncombed whiskers. He sways his head from side to side like a snake. He seems half asleep but is always wide awake. He is 'a fiend in feline shape, a monster of depravity', full of deceit.

He cheats at cards, steals milk, loots the larder, smashes glass, and is suspected when a Peke is stifled or a secret treaty and the Admiralty's plans go missing. Other cats like Mungojerrie and Griddlebone are only his agents; he is the Napoleon of Crime. He always has an alibi, and his footprints are not found in any file of Scotland Yard.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- T.S. Eliot (1888–1965) was a poet, playwright and critic; born in the USA, he later settled in England.
- He received the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1948.
- Major works: 'The Waste Land', 'The Hollow Men', 'Four Quartets' and the play 'Murder in the Cathedral'.
- The poem comes from 'Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats' (1939).
- Macavity is a clever cat-criminal: he commits crimes but is never caught, because he is never at the scene.

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - MACAVITY: THE MYSTERY CAT

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 Macavity is termed a criminal because he breaks every law. He cheats at cards, steals milk, loots the larder, breaks glass, stifles a Peke and even steals secret papers. The poet calls him the Napoleon of Crime, yet he is never caught, as he always has an alibi.

2 He is called a criminal because every crime in the neighbourhood is his work — missing milk, a looted larder, broken glass, a stifled Peke, even lost government plans. He is a 'fiend in feline shape' and controls other cats as his agents, but the police can never prove it.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat' by T.S. Eliot is taken from Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats. It is a funny poem about a cat who is a clever master criminal. He is called the Hidden Paw because no one can ever catch him.

Macavity breaks every law, even the law of gravity. Scotland Yard and the Flying Squad are baffled, because whenever they reach the scene of a crime, Macavity is not there. His footprints are not found in any police file.

He is a tall, thin ginger cat with sunken eyes, a brow lined with thought and a domed head. He looks half asleep but is always awake. He cheats at cards, steals milk, loots larders, stifles Pekes and even steals secret papers. Mungojerrie and Griddlebone are only his agents; he is the Napoleon of Crime.

Whatever happens, Macavity has an alibi and is found resting somewhere far away. Through this playful picture, Eliot mocks the clever criminals of detective stories who always escape the law.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT Here the poet introduces Macavity, the mystery cat.

EXPLANATION The poet says there is no other cat like Macavity. He looks like a cat but behaves like a devil. He is wicked and morally corrupt — a real monster of crime, though he is only a cat.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT The poet repeats Macavity's name to show how special he is.

EXPLANATION The repetition of the name gives the poem a song-like rhythm. The poet stresses that Macavity is unique: no cat or criminal can match his cleverness in committing crimes without being caught.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT The poet names other cat-criminals and shows Macavity is their boss.

EXPLANATION Mungojerrie and Griddlebone are well-known criminal cats, but they are only Macavity's agents. He controls all their operations from behind, just as Napoleon commanded armies. So he is called the Napoleon of Crime.

4 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT The poet describes how Macavity looks.

EXPLANATION The poet says Macavity can be easily recognised by his sunken eyes. He is tall and thin, with a lined brow and a domed head. Even so, nobody can catch him.

5 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT The poet tells how Macavity escapes every time.

EXPLANATION Macavity may be seen anywhere — in a side street or in the town square. But when a crime is discovered, he is never at the spot. This is why the police can never catch him.

6 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Macavity: The Mystery Cat', written by T.S. Eliot.

CONTEXT These are the closing lines of the poem.

EXPLANATION Whenever and wherever a crime takes place, Macavity is never present. He always has a perfect alibi. The refrain shows his cunning: he commits the crime but is never found at the scene.

POEM 8

MODERN INDIAN POEM - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Fire-Hymn

by Keki N. Daruwalla

ABOUT THE POET

Keki Nasserwanji Daruwalla (1937–2024) was born in Lahore into a Parsi (Zoroastrian) family and served as an officer of the Indian Police Service. He is one of the leading Indian poets in English, known for 'Under Orion', 'Apparition in April' and 'Crossing of Rivers'. He received the Sahitya Akademi Award in 1984 and the Commonwealth Poetry Award.

CENTRAL IDEA

The poem shows the guilt of a Parsi who had to cremate his dead child because the Tower of Silence was too far away. Parsis hold fire sacred and do not burn their dead. At a burning ghat, the cruel, forgetful fire reminds him of his act. He vows to save fire from the sin of forgiving, yet the fire-hymn tells him he is forgiven.

SUMMARY

'Fire–Hymn' is written by Keki N. Daruwalla, a Parsi poet. The speaker belongs to the Zoroastrian (Parsi) religion, in which fire is sacred and the dead are not burnt but left at the Tower of Silence.

At a burning ghat, the poet watches a pyre after the fire has died out. The embers lose their cruel redness and turn into grey ash, but some limbs are left half-cooked. To him, the fire forgets its dead: it leaves its work unfinished and moves on.

The poet remembers that he too had given his first child to the flames, because the nearest Tower of Silence was a thousand miles away. By cremating the body he broke his religion's rule and feels guilty. 'Broken, yet rebellious', he swears to save fire from the sin of forgiving. Yet the fire-hymn tells him, 'You stand forgiven'.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Keki N. Daruwalla (1937–2024) was an Indian poet writing in English; 'Fire-Hymn' reflects on fire, death and religious tradition.
- Major collections: 'Under Orion' (1970), 'Apparition in April' (1971), 'Crossing of Rivers' (1976).
- He won the Sahitya Akademi Award (1984) and the Commonwealth Poetry Award.

3. The nearest Tower of Silence was a thousand miles —

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - FIRE–HYMN

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. At the burning ghat the fire dies out before the body is fully burnt, leaving half-cooked limbs. It does not finish its duty to the dead and turns into grey ash. So the poet feels that the fire forgets its dead, as if it has no care for them.

2 'The burning ghat' is the place where dead bodies are cremated. In the poem it refers to the cremation the poet watches, where the fire has died down and limbs are half burnt. It also reminds him of how he once gave his own child to the flames.

3 The poet felt guilty for cremating his child against Parsi custom, and vowed to save fire from the sin of forgiving. But the fire-hymn (the prayer to fire) said to him, 'You stand forgiven'. It means the sacred fire pardoned him, as he had no other choice.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'Fire–Hymn' is a thoughtful poem by Keki N. Daruwalla. The speaker is a Parsi. In the Zoroastrian faith fire is sacred, so the dead are not burnt; they are left at the Tower of Silence.

The poet is at a burning ghat. The fire has died down. The embers lose their cruel redness and become grey ash, but some limbs of the body are only half burnt. The poet feels that the fire forgets its dead and does not finish its work.

This scene brings back a painful memory. He had once given his first child to the flames, because the nearest Tower of Silence was a thousand miles away. By cremating the body, he went against his religion, and he still feels guilty about it.

Broken but rebellious, he swears to save fire from the sin of forgiving. Yet the fire-hymn tells him, 'You stand forgiven'. The poem shows the conflict between religious tradition and the hard situations of real life.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Fire–Hymn', written by Keki N. Daruwalla.

CONTEXT The poet describes the scene at a burning ghat after the fire has died down.

EXPLANATION The red-hot embers slowly cool and turn into grey ash. The ash covers everything, even the limbs that are only half burnt. To the poet the fire seems cruel, because it leaves the body without finishing its work.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Fire–Hymn', written by Keki N. Daruwalla.

CONTEXT The poet, full of guilt about the cremation, makes a vow about fire.

EXPLANATION The poet is broken by grief and guilt, yet he feels a spirit of revolt. He swears that this time he will save the sacred fire from the 'sin of forgiving' — the fire should not be made to pardon people who misuse it.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Fire–Hymn', written by Keki N. Daruwalla.

CONTEXT The poet explains why he had to cremate his child, against Parsi custom.

EXPLANATION Parsis place their dead at the Tower of Silence, but the nearest one was a thousand miles away, so the poet had to cremate the body. He felt he had sinned against fire, but the fire-hymn comforted him, saying that he was forgiven.

NATURE POEM - FREE VERSE - RAINBOW (PART 2)

Snake

by D.H. Lawrence

ABOUT THE POET

David Herbert Lawrence (1885–1930) was an English novelist, poet, short-story writer and essayist, the son of a coal miner from Nottinghamshire. He is famous for novels like Sons and Lovers, The Rainbow and Women in Love. His poems, often in free verse, celebrate nature, instinct and the living energy of animals; 'Snake' comes from his collection Birds, Beasts and Flowers (1923).

CENTRAL IDEA

The poem shows a conflict between natural instinct and man-made education. The poet admires the golden snake as a guest and a 'king', but the voice of his education tells him to kill it because it may be poisonous. He throws a log at it and then feels ashamed. Lawrence celebrates primitive life and criticises the pettiness of 'civilised' man.

SUMMARY

On a hot July day in Sicily, the poet goes to his water-trough in his pyjamas to fetch water. He finds that a golden-brown snake has come before him from a crack in the earth-wall, under the shade of a carob tree. The snake drinks silently and slowly. The poet waits patiently, 'like a second comer', and the snake lifts its head and looks at him vaguely, as cattle do.

The voice of his education tells him that golden snakes in Sicily are poisonous and that a real man would kill it. But the poet secretly likes the snake and feels honoured that it came like a guest to drink at his trough. He admits he was afraid, yet even more honoured.

When the snake slowly begins to go back into the dark hole, the poet picks up a clumsy log and throws it at the water-trough. The snake quickly disappears. At once the poet regrets his mean and vulgar act. He compares himself to the sailor who killed the albatross, calls the snake 'one of the lords of life', and says he must make amends for his pettiness.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- D.H. Lawrence (1885–1930) was an English poet, novelist, short-story writer and essayist.
- 'Snake' praises the dignity of primitive, natural life and criticises the artificial 'education' of modern civilisation.
- Major works: The White Peacock (1911), The Trespasser (1912), Sons and Lovers (1913), The Rainbow (1915), The Plumed Serpent (1926), Lady Chatterley's Lover (1928).
- Setting: a hot July day in Sicily; the snake comes to the poet's water-trough under a carob tree.
- The poet, in pyjamas, waits like a second comer; the voice of his education says the snake must be killed.
- He throws a log at the snake, then regrets his 'mean act' and his 'pettiness'.

   And looked at me vaguely, as drinking cattle do, ... 2020A
2. The voice of my education said to me
   He must be killed 2018A, 2023A, 2025A
3. 'And yet those voices :
   If you were not afraid, you would kill him!' 2024A

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - SNAKE

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. No. The snake did not really notice the poet. It only lifted its head and looked at him vaguely, like drinking cattle, and went on drinking calmly. It was unhurried and peaceful. Had it felt any danger, it would have slipped away quickly; instead it drank its fill and slowly turned back to its hole.

2. The poet felt honoured because the snake came quietly, like a guest, to drink at his water-trough and then left peacefully. He saw it as a noble creature of nature, almost a god from the dark earth, and felt that its visit was a kind of privilege for him.

3. It was a very hot July day in Sicily, so the snake was thirsty. It came out of a crack in the earth-wall and slowly trailed its yellow-brown body down to the edge of the stone water-trough to drink.

4. In Sicily people believe that black snakes are innocent (harmless) but golden snakes are venomous. This is why the poet's 'education' told him that the golden snake at his trough must be killed.

5. The snake rested its throat on the stone bottom of the trough and sipped slowly through its straight mouth, drinking softly into its long slack body. Now and then it lifted its head, flickered its two-forked tongue, looked around vaguely like cattle, and then bent down to drink a little more.

6. The speaker liked the snake because it was calm, peaceful and dignified. It came quietly like a guest, drank its fill and went away without harming anyone. To him it looked like a king or a god of the underworld, a true 'lord of life'.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. 'Snake' is a poem by D.H. Lawrence. On a hot July day in Sicily, the poet goes in his pyjamas to his water-trough under a carob tree. He finds a golden-brown snake already drinking there, so he waits 'like a second comer'.

   The snake drinks slowly, lifts its head and looks at him vaguely like cattle. The voice of his education tells him that golden snakes in Sicily are poisonous and that he must kill it to prove he is a man. But the poet likes the snake and feels honoured by its visit, though he is also afraid.

   When the snake starts going back into the dark hole, the poet throws a clumsy log at the trough. The snake quickly vanishes. Immediately he feels ashamed of his mean act. He remembers the albatross and wishes the snake would come back, because it seemed like a king in exile, 'one of the lords of life'.

   The poem shows the conflict between natural instinct and man-made education, and it praises the dignity of primitive life over the pettiness of modern man.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1. REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Snake', written by D.H. Lawrence.

   CONTEXT The snake has come to the poet's water-trough on a hot day and is drinking while the poet waits.

   EXPLANATION The poet describes the snake's calm manner. Like cattle drinking water, it raises its head and looks at him without real attention. It is not afraid; it is peaceful and unhurried, and this natural dignity attracts the poet.

2. REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Snake', written by D.H. Lawrence.

   CONTEXT While watching the golden snake drink, the poet remembers what he has been taught about snakes in Sicily.

   EXPLANATION His 'education' — the beliefs of society — tells him that golden snakes are poisonous and must be killed. This voice of reason and fear is opposed to his natural feeling of liking and respect for the snake, which is the central conflict of the poem.

Snake (continued)

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'Snake', written by D.H. Lawrence.

CONTEXT The poet admits he likes the snake and feels honoured by its visit, but inner voices keep troubling him.

EXPLANATION The voices challenge his courage: if he were not a coward, he would kill the snake. The poet confesses he is afraid, but he feels even more honoured. The lines show the struggle between fear, social pressure and true admiration.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL POEM - RAINBOW (PART 2)

My Grandmother's House

by Kamala Das

ABOUT THE POET

Kamala Das (1934–2009) was an Indian poet from Kerala who wrote in English and, as Madhavikutty, in Malayalam. Her bold, confessional poems speak openly about love, a woman's longing and loneliness. Famous works include Summer in Calcutta, The Old Playhouse and Other Poems and her autobiography My Story.

CENTRAL IDEA

The poem is the poet's nostalgic memory of her grandmother's house, where she once received true love. After her grandmother's death the house became silent and lifeless. Now, lonely in the city, she has lost her way and begs strangers for even a little love. The poem contrasts the warm love of childhood with the emptiness of her present life.

SUMMARY

In 'My Grandmother's House', Kamala Das remembers a house far away where she once received love. When her grandmother died, the house 'withdrew into silence'. Snakes moved among the books, which she was then too young to read, and her blood turned cold like the moon — a simile that shows her shock and grief.

She often wishes to go back there, to peer through the blind eyes of the windows or listen to the frozen air. In wild despair she wants to bring back an armful of the darkness of that house and keep it behind her bedroom door like a brooding dog.

Speaking to her 'darling', she says he cannot believe that she once lived in such a house and was proud and loved. Now she has lost her way and must beg at strangers' doors for love, 'at least in small change'. The poem is full of nostalgia, loneliness and longing for true love.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Kamala Das (1934–2009) was a famous Indian poet and short-story writer in both English and Malayalam.
- Her autobiography 'My Story' (1976) made a strong impact on the literary world.
- She was shortlisted for the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1984.
- Her poetry is highly autobiographical, dealing with love, longing, loss and loneliness.
- Works in English: Summer in Calcutta (1965), The Descendants (1967), The Old Playhouse and Other Poems (1973), The Anamalai Poems (1985), Only the Soul Knows How to Sing (1996), Yaa Allah (2001).

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - MY GRANDMOTHER'S HOUSE

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The speaker was proud of that house because there she got true, selfless love from her grandmother. As a child she felt safe, cared for and valued there. That warm love was the greatest treasure of her life, which she has never found again.
2. After leaving her grandmother's house, the speaker never found real love again. In her busy, lonely city life she feels lost and empty, and has to 'beg at strangers' doors' for even a little love. So she says she has lost her way.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 'My Grandmother's House' is an autobiographical poem by the Indian poetess Kamala Das. She remembers a house far away where she once received true love from her grandmother.

After her grandmother died, the house became silent and lifeless. Snakes moved among the books, which she was too young to read then, and her blood turned cold like the moon. The house seemed dead.

The poet often thinks of going back to peer through the 'blind eyes' of its windows or to listen to the frozen air. In despair she wishes to bring an armful of its darkness and keep it behind her bedroom door like a brooding dog.

She tells her 'darling' that he cannot believe she once lived in such a house and was proud and loved. Now she has lost her way and begs strangers for love 'at least in small change'. The poem expresses nostalgia, loneliness and a deep longing for true love.

EXPLAIN WITH REFERENCE TO THE CONTEXT - ANSWERS

1 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'My Grandmother's House', written by Kamala Das.

CONTEXT The poet opens the poem by remembering her grandmother's house, which is now far away from her.

EXPLANATION The house is far away in distance and in time. There she once got pure love from her grandmother. The words 'once' and 'far away' show that that love is lost now, setting the nostalgic and sad mood of the poem.

2 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'My Grandmother's House', written by Kamala Das.

CONTEXT The poet describes what happened to the house after her grandmother's death.

EXPLANATION The house is personified: it 'withdrew into silence', as if it too was mourning. Snakes moved freely among the unused books, showing neglect. The child-poet felt shock and grief; 'blood turned cold like the moon' is a simile for her lifeless, cold feeling.

3 REFERENCE These lines are taken from 'My Grandmother's House', written by Kamala Das.

CONTEXT At the end of the poem the poet speaks to her 'darling' about her past and her present.

EXPLANATION She says it is hard to believe that she once lived in such a loving house, felt proud and was loved. Now she has lost her way and begs at strangers' doors for even a little love. The lines contrast her rich childhood with her lonely present.

Textual Reading - Poetry

HOW TO ATTEMPT

In this section the board quotes two to five lines from a poem and asks you to name the poet. You do not need to explain the lines — you only need to recognise them. So learn the famous opening lines and key images of each poem along with the poet's name.

Look for clues: old spellings (goe, mee, houre, Sunne) mean John Donne; a foreign field / England means Rupert Brooke; songs of spring means Keats; a ginger cat or the law of gravity means T.S. Eliot; a king in exile or water dripping from a tap means D.H. Lawrence; strangers' doors and love in small change mean Kamala Das; fire and forgetfulness mean Keki N. Daruwalla. Many extracts repeat year after year, so the table below is worth revising just before the exam.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- Every Textual Reading question asks you to name the poet of a quoted extract.
- Seven board years (2011–2017) asked, five extracts each = 35 items.
- Same extracts repeat across years: "If I should die" (Brooke), "Where are the songs of spring?" (Keats), "I celebrate myself" (Whitman), "Here lies a most beautiful lady" (de la Mare), "Cold, impossible, ahead" (Auden).
- Old spellings like goe, mee, houre, Sunne point to John Donne.

HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Story of English

SUMMARY

English is a member of the large Indo-European family of languages, yet it is a young language — far younger than Sanskrit, Persian, Latin and Greek. Its story starts in AD 449, when Germanic tribes — the Angles, Saxons and Jutes — crossed into Britain. Their dialects became the language we now call Old English (Anglo-Saxon).

Old English (AD 449 to about 1100–1150) was full of inflections (word endings) and was first written in the Runic alphabet; Latin (through Christianity, c. AD 600) and Scandinavian (through Viking settlers) enriched it. After the Norman Conquest of 1066, French became the language of the court, and Middle English (1150–1500) took in thousands of French words; Chaucer and Langland wrote in it, and the Great Vowel Shift changed how long vowels were pronounced. Modern English begins around 1500; Caxton's printing press (1476), Shakespeare and later Dr Johnson's dictionary (1755) helped give it a fixed, standard form.

Through trade and empire English spread across the world and grew into many varieties — British, American, Australian, Indian and other New Englishes. Chinese has more native speakers, but English is the main language of science, trade and the internet: a true window to the world. In India it came with the British, grew into Indian English in the 19th century, is today our second language, and has produced writers like Bankim Chandra, Tagore, Sarojini Naidu, Aurobindo and R.K. Narayan.

IMPORTANT POINTS

- English belongs to the Indo-European family and is much younger than Sanskrit, Persian, Latin and Greek.
- The Angles, Saxons and Jutes (Germanic tribes) invaded Britain in AD 449, in the 5th century; their speech became Old English.
- Old English (AD 449–1066/1150) was a highly inflected language written at first in the Runic alphabet; Latin and Scandinavian were its two big influences.
- The Norman Conquest of 1066 made England almost a colony of France and brought in a flood of French words — the Middle English period (AD 1150–1500).
- The Great Vowel Shift changed the pronunciation of English long vowels; Chaucer, Langland and Wycliff wrote in Middle English.
- Modern English begins around AD 1500; printing came to England in 1476 (Caxton) and helped fix one standard form, the Queen's English; standard British speech is called Received Pronunciation.
- English grew into a world language with many varieties (New Englishes). Chinese, not English, has the most native speakers, but English is the 'window to the world'.
- In India English is the second language and the mother tongue of Anglo-Indians; Indian English grew in the 19th century — Bankim Chandra's Raj Mohan's Wife (1864) was the first Indian novel in English.

TOPIC-WISE NOTES

ORIGIN OF ENGLISH

- Member of the Indo-European family of languages
- Much younger than Sanskrit, Persian, Latin and Greek
- Germanic tribes — Angles, Saxons, Jutes — invaded Britain in AD 449 (5th century)
- 'England' comes from 'Angle-land'; the Celts were pushed to Wales and Scotland

OLD ENGLISH (AD 449 – 1066/1150)

- Also called Anglo-Saxon
- Highly inflected: endings showed case, number and gender
- Early writing in the Runic alphabet, later the Roman alphabet
- Christianity (St Augustine, 597 — c. AD 600) brought Latin words
- Viking (Scandinavian) settlers gave words like they, sky, egg
- Great epic: Beowulf

MIDDLE ENGLISH (AD 1150 – 1500)

- 1066 Norman Conquest — England almost a colony of France
- French became the language of king, court and law; English of common people
- Thousands of French words entered English; many inflections were lost
- Writers: Chaucer (The Canterbury Tales), Langland (Piers Plowman), Wycliff (Bible translation)
- Great Vowel Shift began — pronunciation of long vowels changed

MODERN ENGLISH (FROM AD 1500)

- Printing reached England in 1476 (William Caxton) — spelling became fixed
- Renaissance brought many Latin and Greek words (e.g. drama)
- Shakespeare (Macbeth, Julius Caesar, King Lear) enriched the language
- 18th century (Augustan Age): grammarians fixed rules; Dr Johnson's Dictionary, 1755
- A single standard — the Queen's/King's English; standard speech = Received Pronunciation (RP)

LITERARY LANDMARKS

- Dryden: Mac Flecknoe; Pope — Augustan Age
- Richardson called father of the modern novel; Fielding: Tom Jones
- Goldsmith (She Stoops to Conquer) and Sheridan — English stage
- Romantic Revival: Wordsworth; Keats — Endymion, Hyperion
- Victorian: Matthew Arnold — The Scholar Gypsy; 20th century: T.S. Eliot

AMERICAN ENGLISH & NEW ENGLISHES

- English went to America with settlers; Mark Twain's Huckleberry Finn shows American speech
- Noah Webster's dictionary gave American spellings (color, center)
- Many world varieties: Australian, Caribbean, African (Wole Soyinka — Nigerian), Indian
- These are called New Englishes — the latest era of the language
- Rapid change in the last decades of the 20th century (technology, internet)

ENGLISH IN INDIA

- Came with the East India Company; Macaulay's Minute (1835) made it the medium of education
- Indian English grew in the 19th century
- Second language of India; mother tongue of Anglo-Indians
- Bankim Chandra's Raj Mohan's Wife (1864) — first Indian novel in English
- Writers: Tagore (Gitanjali, Nobel 1913), Sarojini Naidu (Nightingale of India), Aurobindo (Savitri), R.K. Narayan, Mulk Raj Anand

ENGLISH AS A WORLD LANGUAGE

- Chinese has the most native speakers, not English
- English is the main language of science, trade, aviation, the UN and the internet
- Called a 'window to the world'
- Many varieties together form a Standard Spoken English used everywhere

ANSWERS - SUBJECTIVE QUESTIONS - STORY OF ENGLISH

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1. The Great Vowel Shift took place roughly between 1400 and 1600 (15th–16th century), i.e. between the times of Chaucer and Shakespeare. During it the long vowels of English changed their sound, which is why modern spelling often does not match pronunciation.
2. After the Norman Conquest (1066) French became the language of the ruling class. Thousands of French words entered English, especially in law, government, church, army, fashion and food — e.g. court, justice, parliament, beef, pork. English vocabulary became much richer and gained many synonyms.
3. English is today a global language. It is spoken as a first language in the UK, USA, Australia etc., and as a second or foreign language almost everywhere. It is the main language of science, trade, internet, air travel and international meetings, so it links people of the whole world.
4. A drama is written to be performed on stage. Its main features are a plot, characters, dialogue, conflict and action. It is usually divided into acts and scenes and has stage directions. Its parts are exposition, rising action, climax, falling action and resolution.

5. English is used as a second language in countries such as India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Nigeria, Kenya, Ghana, Singapore and the Philippines. In these former colonies it is used in government, courts, higher education and business beside the local languages.

6. English borrowed words because of contact with other peoples: invasions (Vikings, Normans), Christianity and the Renaissance (Latin and Greek), trade, travel and the British colonies. New things and ideas needed new names, so English freely took words from many languages.

7. A novel is a long story in prose. Its features are a detailed plot, many characters, a setting in time and place, dialogue, a point of view and a theme. It shows life at length and develops characters slowly, often with sub-plots.

8. Indians learn English quickly because they are used to living with many languages, English is taught from school level, it is needed for higher studies and jobs, and long British rule made it familiar. Films, media and the internet also give constant exposure.

9. A tragedy has five stages: exposition (introduction), rising action (growing conflict), climax (turning point), falling action, and catastrophe (the hero's downfall or death). Shakespeare's tragedies usually follow this five-act pattern.

10. Two famous works of William Shakespeare are Hamlet and Macbeth. (Others: Othello, King Lear, Romeo and Juliet, The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It.)

11. English spelling and pronunciation were standardized mainly by the printing press, brought to England by William Caxton in 1476, which used the London dialect, and later by Dr Samuel Johnson's Dictionary (1755), which fixed the spellings of words.

12. A farce is a light comedy built on exaggerated, absurd and improbable situations, slapstick action and confusion. Its only aim is to make the audience laugh loudly; character and serious meaning matter little. Chekhov's A Marriage Proposal is a good example.

13. The early Indian poets in English had two main concerns: to show that they could write English as well as the English poets (so they copied Romantic and Victorian models), and to express Indian life, culture and patriotism through the English language.

14. Received Pronunciation (RP) is the accent of educated people of southern England (London), used in public schools, Oxford and Cambridge and later by the BBC. It came to be treated as the standard or 'correct' British pronunciation.

15. In the last few decades rapid changes have been noticed in English vocabulary (many new words from science, technology and the internet), grammar and usage (more informal, simpler forms) and pronunciation (influence of American and other varieties).

16. English became the great empire language because of the spread of the British Empire across the world, followed by the economic and political power of the USA. Trade, science, technology and the media then made it a world language.

17. The 18th-century grammarians shared the Age of Reason's love of order, rules and correctness. Like the age, they wanted to fix and 'purify' the language, so they wrote grammars and dictionaries laying down strict rules of usage.

18. Indian poetry in English began in the 19th century with Henry Derozio, Toru Dutt and Michael Madhusudan Dutt, followed by Sri Aurobindo, Sarojini Naidu and Tagore. After 1947 modern poets like Nissim Ezekiel, Kamala Das, A.K. Ramanujan and Keki Daruwalla wrote in an Indian voice.

19. The University Wits were a group of young playwrights of the late 16th century educated at Oxford or Cambridge — Christopher Marlowe, Thomas Kyd, Robert Greene, John Lyly, George Peele, Thomas Nashe and Thomas Lodge. They prepared the stage for Shakespeare.

20. The Old English period (c. 450–1100) is characterised by inflections. Nouns, adjectives and verbs changed their endings to show case, number, gender and tense. Most of these endings were lost in the Middle English period.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS - ANSWERS

1 Indian English is the variety of English used by educated Indians. English came to India with the East India Company and was made the medium of higher education after Macaulay's Minute (1835). Today it is an associate official language and a link language between different states.

Indian English has its own features. Its pronunciation is shaped by Indian mother tongues, it uses Indian words like guru, pandit, dharna, lathi, and it has special phrases such as cousin-brother or do the needful.

It is used in courts, administration, science, business and media, and Indian writers have produced great literature in it. It is now accepted as a respected variety of world English.

2 For most Indian students English is a second or third language, so they face several problems. Its spelling does not match its pronunciation, and sounds like th, v/w, z are not found in many Indian languages.

Its grammar is different too — articles, tenses, prepositions and word order often confuse learners, and they tend to translate from their mother tongue. Many schools lack trained teachers, and there is little chance to hear and speak English outside the classroom.

Fear of making mistakes and exam-oriented rote learning also hold students back. Regular reading, listening and speaking practice can solve most of these difficulties.

3 Both are forms of prose fiction, but they differ in length and scope. A short story can be read at one sitting; it has a single plot, few characters, one main incident and creates a single effect.

A novel is long and is divided into chapters. It has a complex plot with sub-plots, many characters who develop slowly, and it shows a wide picture of life over a long period.

The short story is compact and suggestive, while the novel is detailed and descriptive. For example, R.K. Narayan wrote short stories in Malgudi Days and novels like The Guide.

4 In the Middle English period (1100–1500) there was no single standard English. Scholars divide it into four or five main dialects: Northern, East Midland, West Midland, Southern and Kentish.

These dialects differed in pronunciation, grammar and vocabulary, so people of one region could hardly understand writers of another. Northern showed more Scandinavian influence, while Southern kept older forms.

The East Midland dialect, spoken around London, Oxford and Cambridge, became the basis of Standard English because London was the centre of trade and government, Chaucer wrote in it, and Caxton's printing press (1476) used it.

5 Received Pronunciation (RP) is the accent of educated speakers of southern England. The word 'received' means 'accepted in polite society'. It grew from the speech of London and the court and spread through the public schools and the universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

In the 20th century the BBC used it on radio, so it was also called 'BBC English' or 'Queen's English'. It was treated as the model of correct British pronunciation and is used in many dictionaries.

RP is not linked with any one region but with social class and education. Today only a small number of British people speak it, and regional accents are more accepted.

6 The future of English in India is bright. After independence some people wanted to remove it, but it remained as an associate official language and a link language between states with different mother tongues.

English is the language of higher education, science, technology, law, business and the internet. Good jobs in India and abroad need English, so parents prefer English-medium schools and its use is growing every year.

It also connects India with the rest of the world. English will not replace Hindi or other Indian languages, but it will continue to grow beside them as an important second language.

7 Indian poetry in English began in the 19th century. Henry Derozio, Michael Madhusudan Dutt and Toru Dutt were early poets who followed English Romantic models but wrote on Indian themes.

In the early 20th century Sri Aurobindo, Sarojini Naidu ('Nightingale of India') and Rabindranath Tagore, whose Gitanjali won the Nobel Prize in 1913, gave it fame.

After independence modern poets like Nissim Ezekiel, Kamala Das, A.K. Ramanujan, R. Parthasarathy, Jayanta Mahapatra and Keki N. Daruwalla wrote in a frank, modern and truly Indian voice. Today Indian English poetry has its own place in world literature.

8 We can improve our English by regular practice of all four skills — listening, speaking, reading and writing. Reading newspapers, story books and magazines daily builds vocabulary and gives a feel for correct sentences.

Listening to English news, talks and films improves pronunciation. We should speak English with friends without fear of mistakes, and use a dictionary to learn new words.

Writing a diary, letters or short essays and getting them corrected helps us learn grammar. Learning grammar through use, not by rote, and practising every day will surely make our English better.

9 (a) The Gitanjali — Rabindranath Tagore
(b) The Wasteland — T.S. Eliot
(c) Tom Jones — Henry Fielding
(d) In Memoriam — Lord Tennyson
(e) Othello — William Shakespeare

10 Five English poets: Geoffrey Chaucer, John Milton, William Wordsworth, John Keats, Lord Tennyson (also P.B. Shelley, T.S. Eliot).

Five English dramatists: William Shakespeare, Christopher Marlowe, Ben Jonson, Oliver Goldsmith, George Bernard Shaw (also R.B. Sheridan, John Galsworthy).

11 Five Indian English writers: Rabindranath Tagore, Mulk Raj Anand, R.K. Narayan, Raja Rao, Kamala Das (also Nissim Ezekiel, Khushwant Singh, Salman Rushdie, Arundhati Roy).

12 Global English means English used all over the world as a common language. About 400 million people speak it as their mother tongue and many more as a second or foreign language.

It spread first through the British Empire and then through the power of the USA. Today it is the main language of science, technology, business, the internet, aviation, sports and international bodies like the UN.

It has many varieties — British, American, Australian, Indian — but they are mutually understood. Global English links nations and gives people wide opportunities.

13 English is truly a world language. It is the first language of countries like Britain, the USA, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, and a second language in India, Nigeria, Singapore and many other former colonies.

It reached every continent through British colonies and trade, and later through American power in films, music, science and computers. More than half of the world's books, research papers and websites are in English.

It is an official language of the UN and is used in air travel, shipping, sports and diplomacy. Its rich vocabulary and flexibility help it serve as the common language of the world.

14 (a) Pride and Prejudice — Jane Austen
(b) The Paradise Lost — John Milton
(c) The Guide — R.K. Narayan
(d) The Merchant of Venice — William Shakespeare
(e) The Gitanjali — Rabindranath Tagore

15 (a) Tom Jones — Henry Fielding
(b) Coolie — Mulk Raj Anand
(c) David Copperfield — Charles Dickens
(d) The Guide — R.K. Narayan
(e) The Merchant of Venice — William Shakespeare

16 In India English is a second language for educated people, used beside their mother tongue. The Constitution made Hindi the official language and English an associate official language.

English is the medium of higher education, science, medicine, engineering, law and the higher courts. It is the language of central administration, big business, banking and the internet, and it links people of different states.

Under the three-language formula it is taught in schools across the country. It also connects India with the world and opens global job opportunities. So English holds a strong and lasting place in India as a second language.

17 Five English novelists: Henry Fielding, Jane Austen, Charles Dickens, Thomas Hardy, George Eliot (also Samuel Richardson, Walter Scott, Virginia Woolf).

18 (a) As You Like It — William Shakespeare
(b) The Old Man and the Sea — Ernest Hemingway
(c) Pride and Prejudice — Jane Austen
(d) Train to Pakistan — Khushwant Singh
(e) The Wasteland — T.S. Eliot

19 (a) Arms and the Man — George Bernard Shaw
(b) King Lear — William Shakespeare
(c) The Princess — Lord Tennyson
(d) Untouchable — Mulk Raj Anand
(e) The Rape of the Lock — Alexander Pope

20 (a) Tom Jones — Henry Fielding
(b) In Memoriam — Lord Tennyson
(c) The Wasteland — T.S. Eliot
(d) Arms and the Man — George Bernard Shaw
(e) Macbeth — William Shakespeare

21 English reached America with British settlers in the 17th century and slowly developed into a separate variety called American English. Noah Webster's American Dictionary (1828) gave it its own spellings like color, center, program.

It differs from British English in pronunciation (the 'r' is sounded), vocabulary (truck/lorry, elevator/lift, gas/petrol) and some grammar. It borrowed words from Native American, Spanish, Dutch and African languages.

Through Hollywood, music, business, science and the internet, American English now influences English everywhere and is the most widely heard variety in the world.

22 The Indian English novel grew strongly in the 1930s with the 'big three' — Mulk Raj Anand (Untouchable, Coolie), R.K. Narayan (The Guide, Swami and Friends) and Raja Rao (Kanthapura). They wrote about poverty, caste, village life and the freedom struggle.

Later Khushwant Singh (Train to Pakistan), Anita Desai and Kamala Markandaya enriched it. Salman Rushdie's Midnight's Children (Booker Prize, 1981) brought world fame, followed by Vikram Seth, Amitav Ghosh and Arundhati Roy.

Today the Indian English novel is read and honoured all over the world.

23 Five Indian English novelists: Mulk Raj Anand, R.K. Narayan, Raja Rao, Khushwant Singh, Anita Desai (also Salman Rushdie, Vikram Seth, Arundhati Roy).

24 English is very important in India. It is an associate official language and the main link language between people of different states who speak different mother tongues.

It is the medium of higher and professional education, science and technology, the Supreme Court and High Courts, central administration, banking, business and the media. Most good jobs, especially in IT and multinational companies, require English.

It is also our window to the world — it connects India with international trade, research and culture. For these reasons English remains essential for the progress of the country and of every student.

25 The Modern English period begins around 1500. Early Modern English (1500–1700) is the language of Shakespeare and the Bible of 1611; Late Modern English continues from 1700 to today.

The printing press (Caxton, 1476), the Renaissance, the Great Vowel Shift and Dr Johnson's Dictionary (1755) helped to fix spelling and grammar. Thousands of Latin and Greek words entered during the Renaissance.

Grammar became simple, with very few inflections and fixed word order. With colonies, science and technology the vocabulary grew enormously, and English became a world language.

26 Old English, also called Anglo-Saxon, was spoken from about 450 to 1100 AD. It came to Britain with the Germanic tribes — the Angles, Saxons and Jutes.

It was a highly inflected language: nouns, adjectives and verbs changed endings to show case, gender, number and tense, and word order was free. Its vocabulary was mostly Germanic, with some Latin words from Christianity and Norse words from the Viking raids.

Its four dialects were Northumbrian, Mercian, West Saxon and Kentish. The epic Beowulf is its most famous work, and King Alfred encouraged writing in it.

27 Learning English as a second language is difficult because the learner's mother tongue interferes. Its sounds, stress and intonation are different, and its spelling is not phonetic, so pronunciation becomes a problem.

Grammar points such as articles, tenses, prepositions and idioms do not match Indian languages, and learners translate word for word. There is little chance to use English in daily life, and trained teachers and good materials are often lacking.

Fear and shyness stop students from speaking. Plenty of listening, reading and speaking practice in a friendly setting is the way to overcome these problems.

28 (a) Othello — William Shakespeare
(b) The Canterbury Tales — Geoffrey Chaucer
(c) The Paradise Lost — John Milton
(d) The Waste Land — T.S. Eliot
(e) The Rivals — R.B. Sheridan

PYQ 4

PART 4 - ANSWERS

Subjective Answers

Answers to the 100 Subjective Questions, numbered to match

1. The snake came out of its hole to drink water. It came out trailing its slack body.

2. No, he is not afraid of death. He thinks that if he dies and his body is buried in a foreign field, that corner will be England for ever.

3. The poet has desire and sense. He loved his wife very much, and that desire and motive to see his beloved will make his journey speedier.

4. The poet, Walt Whitman, in the poem, is observing a spear of summer grass.

5. Man's dependence on fortune makes his power feeble. A man can't recall lost time. He can't control natural phenomena.

6. Lomov does not believe that Choobookov will accept his proposal. He feels hesitation and fear in speaking about marriage.

7. This line is taken from "Sweetest Love, I Do Not Goe" composed by John Donne. In this line the poet wants to say that he promises to come back like the sun, which comes back every day. He says that he will make a speedier journey, having more power than the sun. The poet speaks of man's power, which is very weak in comparison to nature. A man can't recall lost time. He can't control natural phenomena.

8. India, Malaysia, Singapore, Nigeria and Namibia.

9. The poet means that when he dies, nobody will remember that beautiful lady of the West Country. So he says, "When I crumble, who will remember?"

10. The poet wants to go away from his beloved because death is certain. He wants to amuse himself. The poet wants to keep himself happy before death. He tells his beloved that this parting is nothing in comparison to the final parting which comes with death.

11. William Shakespeare was an English dramatist, poet and actor. He was born in 1564 and died in 1616. He produced most of his known works between 1589 and 1613. He is known as the father of English drama. Hamlet, Julius Caesar, Othello and The Rape of Lucrece are among his famous works.

12. Seibei wandered about the town in search of gourds because he was fond of collecting gourds.

13. His beloved wastes the speaker's life by sighing and weeping without need. She is the better part of him, so when she wastes her life in grief, she wastes his life too.

14. His speech proves that he is a great orator and can stir the mind and heart of all the Negroes of America. His commitment to the rights of people and his concern for their uplift have been revealed in his speech.

15. Martin Luther dreams that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed. One day the desert state of Mississippi will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice. One day his children will be judged not by the colour of their skin but by the content of their character.

16. This line is taken from "I Have a Dream" by Martin Luther King Jr. In this line the speaker demands that the Negroes must now be given their rights if America is to be a great nation. Martin Luther King Jr. talks about his dream of an American society in which there is mutual harmony between blacks and whites, no class is exploited, people are judged on the basis of their character, and white children mix and play with black children.

17. Dr. Zakir Hussain took the oath of loyalty to the Constitution of India.

18. Indian civilization and European civilization are quite different from each other. The tendency of Indian civilization is to elevate the moral being. On the other hand, the western civilization propagates immorality. European civilization is godless but Indian civilization is based on strong belief in God.

19. Old persons are the travelers, and they are blessed with their last distress, that is, death.

20. Dr. Zakir Hussain was born in 1897 and he passed away in 1969, so he lived for seventy-two years (72 years).

21. Macavity is termed a "criminal" because he has broken every human law, and he even breaks the law of gravity. He is involved in all kinds of crime.

22. The important information Nanukaka collected at Ratiram's place was that after refusing the proposal of marriage of his daughter to Sohanlal's son, the welfare minister had decided to marry his daughter to the prince of Ninnore. Another piece of information was that Ratiram would not give tickets to the minister next time.

23. Children of a joint family in Bangladesh are looked after by the whole family; all the children are looked after together.

24. Lomov is thirty-five years old. He feels that this is a critical age, as he must marry now and settle down to a quiet and regular life. He is a nervous man who suffers from palpitations and sleeplessness, so he thinks he cannot wait any longer to find a wife.

25. The speaker was proud of living in that house because there she had received love and affection from her grandmother.

26. This line is taken from "Indian Civilization and Culture" written by Mahatma Gandhi. In this line the writer wants to say that our ancestors had observed life very closely. They found that happiness does not depend on wealth, because there are many rich people who are very unhappy. On the other hand, there are several poor men who are happy. They felt that happiness is a mental experience. Observing all this, our ancestors dissuaded us from luxuries and pleasures. I think they were really right in their approach.

27. The great lesson that India had to teach the West was humanity.

28. The speech of educated people in London and South-East England, taught in the English public schools and later used by the BBC, came to be known as "Received Pronunciation" (RP).

29. The under-secretary always obeyed Nanukaka because Nanukaka was his guest and his mother's brother, although he was not willing to do so.

30. Modern English (New English) is the form of English spoken since the Great Vowel Shift in England, which began in the late 14th century and was complete by the 17th century.

31. This line is taken from "Bharat is My Home" by Dr. Zakir Hussain. In this line the author wants to say that real work has two important sides. Work on oneself – this means improving our own character, habits, thoughts, discipline, honesty and moral values; a person should make himself better, responsible and sincere. Work for society – this means working for the welfare of others and the nation; a person should help society by serving people, maintaining unity, peace and harmony, and contributing to national development. Dr. Hussain believes that a good citizen must develop himself first and then serve society. Only when individuals improve themselves can society and the nation progress.

32. According to the poet, in Sicily black snakes are innocent and golden snakes are venomous, so the golden ones must be killed.

33. This line is taken from Martin Luther King Jr.'s famous speech "I Have a Dream". Here the speaker appeals for complete freedom and equality for all people in America, especially African Americans. The phrase "Let freedom ring" means that freedom should be enjoyed by everyone without discrimination. By saying "every hill and every molehill of Mississippi", King emphasizes that freedom must reach every corner of the country, not only big cities but also the smallest villages and backward areas. Mississippi is specially mentioned because it was one of the states where racial discrimination, injustice and cruelty against Black people were very severe. Through this line, King demands an end to racism and urges America to fulfil its promise of liberty and justice for all. Thus, the line expresses hope, unity and the dream of an equal and free American society, where people are judged by their character, not by the colour of their skin.

34. Our past glory and culture are the base on which the growth of our national culture and national character depends. So the author rightly says that our history is not dead and static. It is still alive and dynamic. Our future depends on the importance of the past.

35. Macavity is called a criminal because he has broken every human law and he also breaks the law of gravity. He is involved in all sorts of crime.

36. Benjy's parents silently believed that the land was their real wealth and security. They hoped that through hard work, and through Benjy's growing business, they would one day own their land, live comfortably and be free from poverty in their old age.

37. Censorship is generally imposed during an emergency and in times of war. When peace returns, freedom is restored.

38. According to the poet, external beauty is not permanent. It vanishes and passes away with the passage of time.

39. Three modern novelists are: 1. Charles Dickens 2. Jane Austen 3. Daniel Defoe.

40. The poet in 'Song of Myself' celebrates his own self. The poet says that he will "sing myself" for "every atom belonging to me as good belongs to you." He loafs on the grass in summer and invites his soul to appear. He relates that he has been formed from this soil, for he was born here, as were his parents, grand-parents and great grand-parents. [He observes a spear of summer grass.]

41. These lines are taken from the poem "Now the Leaves Are Falling Fast" composed by W. H. Auden. In these lines, the poet wants to say that death is following human beings everywhere. The phrase "dead in hundreds" shows that a large number of people are dying, especially due to wars, diseases and suffering in modern society. The word "wooden" suggests dead bodies or lifeless people, as wood has no feeling or movement. The dead are said to follow us in our track, which means that death is always close to human life and cannot be avoided. Wherever people go, death follows them silently. The poet presents a dark and fearful picture of life, showing that the modern world is full of loss, sorrow and death. Thus, these lines highlight the reality of human life, where death is constant and humans are helpless before it.

42. Our ancestors felt that large cities were a trap and a useless encumbrance. They thought that people would not lead a happy life in them. They were of the view that large cities were dens of robbers and thieves. In large cities, the poor would be robbed by the rich. Our ancestors were, therefore, satisfied with small villages.

43. Fire was one of the earliest and most important discoveries of man. It gave him warmth in cold weather, protection from wild animals at night, and the means to cook food, which made it easy to eat and digest. With fire, man could live in colder places and his survival became much safer.

44. The dramatic elements are plot, music, dialogue, character, gesture and soliloquy.

45. The four dialects of Old English are Kentish, Northumbrian, Mercian and West Saxon.

47. It is all about the rights of the Negroes, who are still suffering from injustice there. That is why Martin Luther suggests that the nation should give the Negroes citizenship rights; they should be given justice, they must not be isolated from society, and they must be regarded as equals. Only then would the dream of a great nation come true.

48. According to Dr. Zakir Hussain, education is the prime instrument of national purpose. He also admits that he has been elected to the highest office because of his long association with education.

50. India is actually an ancient country. It has the oldest culture and civilization, but it remained a slave for a long time. It was liberated in 1947. So the writer says that India is a young state of an ancient people.

51. The writer knew that her host followed his religious custom, which did not allow him to eat together with a foreigner. It was not a sign of disrespect. Pearl S. Buck had grown up in Asia and understood such customs, so she respected his belief and did not mind it at all.

52. The fire-hymn told the poet that he was forgiven. So the poet decided never to commit such a sin again in his life.

53. Martin Luther King Jr. says that one hundred years later, the condition of the Negroes is still pitiable and has not changed. Mississippi especially is sweltering in the heat of injustice.

54. Martin Luther King Junior talks about the trials and tribulations faced by the Negroes around the country. When the Negroes raise their voice against racial discrimination, their voices are suppressed. They are mistreated and treated as last-grade citizens.

55. He is overwhelmed by the trust his people have placed in him by electing him to the highest office in the land.

56. The poet means that the leaves on the branches of the tree are falling and the trees are becoming leafless. It also refers to a person who slowly goes towards death and at last to the grave. Like a tree, every human life has to be destroyed. No one can remain alive forever. Everyone is mortal.

57. They are the messengers of death who seize our soul, and as a result we die.

58. England, Ireland, South Africa and Australia.

59. Editorial policy is controlled by two chief factors — the advertisers and the owner (proprietor) of the publication.

60. Our ancestors dissuaded us from luxuries and pleasures because they knew that we can be happy and healthy by using our own hands and feet. They also knew that luxuries and comforts make us their slaves.

61. This line is taken from "I Have a Dream" by Martin Luther King Jr. Through these powerful words, the speaker expresses great joy, relief and hope at the thought of finally achieving freedom from racial discrimination. The repetition of "Free at last!" shows the deep emotional feeling of African Americans who had suffered slavery, injustice and inequality for centuries. It reflects their long struggle for civil rights, dignity and equal opportunities. By saying "Thank God Almighty", Martin Luther King Jr. acknowledges that freedom is not only a political victory but also a moral and spiritual blessing. He believes that God stands with truth, justice and equality.

62. The house went into silence because the woman who lived there (the poet's grandmother) had died.

63. A young Sylheti woman goes to her mother's house during her pregnancy. This is the reward of pregnancy for her.

64. According to Martin Luther King Jr., the condition of the Negroes was pitiable. He wanted nothing but freedom for them — the same opportunities, facilities and citizenship as others.

The main University Wits were Christopher Marlowe, Robert Greene, Thomas Nashe, Thomas Lodge, George Peele and John Lyly.

72. Mahatma Gandhi was a man of experience. He felt that the mind is a restless bird because the more it gets, the more it wants, and it still remains unsatisfied. Gandhi felt that the more we indulge in our passions, the more unbridled they become. The cause of the mind being restless is the multiplication of our needs.

73. The tendency of Indian civilization is to elevate the moral being, whereas Western civilization tends to promote immorality. The former believes in God and the latter is godless.

74. Our ancestors enjoyed true home rule because they were not much attached to luxury and pleasure. They followed their agricultural occupation and also used their feet and hands.

75. Spring comes before the arrival of summer, and autumn starts with the departure of summer. Autumn and summer are related to spring in terms of music and happiness.

76. Our ancestors had observed life very closely. They found that happiness does not depend on wealth, because there are many rich people who are very unhappy. On the other hand, there are several poor men who are happy. They felt that happiness is a mental experience. Observing all this, our ancestors dissuaded us from luxuries and pleasures. I think they were really right in their approach.

77. The author went to the minister in a Jodhpuri coat. Nanukaka tied a huge orange turban round his head.

78. The period between AD 1066 and AD 1500 is called the Middle English period. Its texts are easier to read and understand. Humans first appeared on earth a million and a half years ago. He was a little more than an animal then. Still, early humans had some advantages over animals. He had a large brain, an erect body with fast-moving hands. He invented a language to communicate with his colleagues. The ability to speak was of the highest value because it allowed them to share ideas and plans together. Speech enabled the transmission of ideas from generation to generation. These special advantages put humans far ahead of all other living creatures.

7. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow : 4 × 1 = 4

Ramesh was the son of a poor farmer in a small village of Bihar. His father could not afford to send him to a good school, but Ramesh was determined to study. Every morning he walked five kilometres to the government school in the next village. In the evening he helped his father in the fields, and at night he studied by the light of a lantern. His teachers were impressed by his hard work and honesty. When the results of the board examination were declared, Ramesh had topped the district. The villagers were proud of him, and the headmaster honoured him at a special function. Ramesh said that hard work and the blessings of his parents were the secret of his success.

Questions :

a) Why could Ramesh not go to a good school ?

b) How far did Ramesh walk every day to reach his school ?

c) How did Ramesh spend his evenings ?

d) What, according to Ramesh, was the secret of his success ?

OR

Write a précis of the following passage and give a suitable title : 4

Time is the most precious thing in the world. Money that is lost can be earned again, and health that is lost can be regained with care and medicine, but time once lost is lost for ever. Every moment that passes is gone and never comes back. Those who understand the value of time do their work at the proper moment and never put off till tomorrow what can be done today. Such people rise in life and earn name and fame. On the other hand, those who waste their time in idle gossip and useless pleasures repent later. Students, in particular, should make the best use of their time, because the habits they form now will shape their whole future.

Ramesh was a poor farmer who lived in a small village in Bihar. He had a small piece of land, but he worked on it day and night. Every morning he got up before sunrise and went to his field with his plough and his two oxen. One year there was no rain and his crop dried up. His neighbours lost hope and many of them left the village to find work in the city. Ramesh, however, did not lose heart. He dug a small well in a corner of his field and watered his plants with great labour. When the harvest came, his field was the only green field in the village. The villagers were surprised and learnt from him that hard work and patience never go waste.

Questions :

a) Who was Ramesh and where did he live ?

b) What happened to Ramesh's crop when there was no rain ?

c) How did Ramesh save his crop ?

d) What lesson did the villagers learn from Ramesh ?

Write a précis of the following passage and give a suitable title : 4

Trees are our best friends. They give us fresh air, cool shade, fruits, flowers, wood and medicines. They take in the carbon dioxide that we breathe out and give out oxygen, which is necessary for life. Trees bring rain, check soil erosion and prevent floods. They are also the home of countless birds and animals. In spite of all this, man is cutting down forests on a large scale for houses, roads and industries. As a result, the earth is becoming hotter, rainfall is uncertain and many species of birds and animals are disappearing. If we want to save our planet, we must stop the cutting of trees and plant more and more of them.
